FIRE REDUCES A TOWERING LANDMARK TO RUBBLE

The Madonna and Child — a towering houseboat of redwood and stained glass (left photo) which had become a landmark at the northern entrance of Sausalito — was a charred ruin today (right photo) in which a fireman sifted through debris. Firemen were in the process of leveling the remains of structure deemed a hazard. The houseboat, a creation of artist J. Christopher Roberts of Sausalito, is now owned by Andy Loveman who was reportedly on vacation at the time of the spectacular Saturday night fire.

The Marin County Fire Department responded to the call at 9:24 p.m. and was assisted by units from Sausalito, Tamalpais Valley and the Alto Richardson Bay departments. They finished mopup operations at 3 a.m. Sunday. The old ferry boat Vallejo, moored nearby, suffered some minor deck damage in the blaze which is still under investigation. However, there was no other report of damage to the Gate 5 community of about 60 other houseboats.

Congress Bloc Asks $12 Billion Tax Cut

Could Restore Families To 1973 Spending Power

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Joint Economic Committee has called for a $10 to $12 billion tax cut.

Its proposal would give an extra $300 in spending power to a family of four earning $10,000 a year and eliminate income taxes altogether for families making under $6,773.

It would bring the buying power of low and middle income taxpayers back to where it stood at the end of 1973, before double-digit inflation set in.

The report, based on a study of inflation undertaken at the direction of the Senate, made these predictions for 1975:½

Even with a stimulating tax cut, unemployment which reached 6.5 per cent in November will climb, averaging about 7.5 per cent for all of 1975.

After falling for 12 straight months, national output will either stagnate or decline still further for six more months in the new year before beginning to turn around.

Inflation will abate to about a 7 per cent rate if 1975 harvests are good and if there are no new "price shocks" — like an oil embargo.

Reflecting the views of its professional staff, the committee concluded that the way to fight inflation is to move against recession, stimulating a surge in productivity to cool off prices.

The committee said the economy is in one of those rare stages when a tax cut carries little prospect of being inflationary.

"Fortunately," it said, "in 1975 the same policies which are needed to overcome recession and reduce unemployment will also help to restrain inflation.

"In contrast to some past periods, there is for the immediate future no 'trade-off' between inflation and unemployment."

Often policymakers must choose between tolerating more unemployment to combat inflation or fostering inflation to cut unemployment.

But a tax cut now, the panel said, would stimulate buying, productivity and output.

High Court Backs Pardon Powers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today upheld by a 6-3 vote a broad pardon power for the president of the United States, including imposing conditions in particular cases.

"The very essence of the pardoning power is to treat each case individually," said Chief Justice Warren E. Burger for the court majority.

The opinion said the pardoning power derives from the Constitution alone and cannot be modified, abridged or diminished by any law.

Dissenters were Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall.

The case was brought to the high Court by Maurice Schick, who as an Army sergeant in 1954 was found guilty of killing an officer's daughter in Japan. Schick drew the death sentence after a court-martial for the murder of Susan Rothschild, 8, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Jacquard Rothschild, at a housing project near Camp Zama.

In 1960, President Dwight D. Eisenhower commuted the sentence to life at hard labor, but added the condition that Schick would never be eligible for parole.

Eventually Schick, who had been in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., petitioned the federal courts to have the condition disregarded.

He cited the Supreme Court's outlawing of the death penalty as then administered and argued that he had a right to resentence to a simple life term, which carries the possibility of parole.

But Burger said Schick's death sentence was not pending in 1972, when the Court handed down its landmark opinion, because it had long since been commuted.

CONSULTANT HIRED

Transit-School Bus Merger Eyed

The Marin County Transit District board today launched a $25,000 study to determine the feasibility of merging school bus operations with local public transit.

The study, expected to take about six months, was awarded to JHK and Associates of San Francisco. The county schools office will pay $10,000 and the transit district $15,000.

The consultant also is expected to report on possible consolidation of school district bus operations without involving the tax transit district.

Such a study was recommenedd by last year's county grand jury to determine if tax savings and better service could be accomplished through an expanded and utilized public transit system.

A special advisory committee will work with the consultant in preparing the study. That committee will be made up of representatives of the county schools office, Tamalpais and San Rafael high school districts, Shoreline and Novato unified school districts, Marin Community College District and county transit district.

The consultant's contract notes that all information developed by the firm will be held confidential unless released by the transit board.

The main thrust of the study is to determine the transportation needs of each school district, determine whether a combined schools and the public and determine whether consolidation among school districts or in cooperation with the transit district would be economically advantageous.

The contract also calls for development of a plan for a demonstration project. Such a project would involve one school district and the county. No district has been selected.

Robert Spain of the county schools office said legislation may be needed if a consolidated school-public transit system is undertaken to avoid loss of state bus subsidies to the school districts.

In other action, the transit board said it will study whether its subsidy to Whistlestop Wheels complies with federal regulations that the elderly and handicapped receive reduced fares. A report is expected at the next transit meeting.

Diplomat Under Fire For CIA Leadership

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., demanded today that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger fire Richard Helms as ambassador to Iran for alleged illegal CIA spying on Americans wtile Helms headed the controversial agency.

Proxmire also asked acting Attorney General Laurence Silberman to have the Justice Department "take immediate legal action against any and all officials" who violated the 1974 National Security Act which established the Central Intelligence Agency.

President Ford warned current CIA Director William E. Colby yesterday that he would tolerate no such spying on Americans in this country during his administration,

Proxmire has long been a foe of various covert activities of the CIA and lost no time in reacting to a New York Times report yesterday detailing alleged spying on thousands of Americans by the agency beginning in the 1950s.

Proxmire made his requests in letters to Kissinger and Silberman. Kissinger's office acknowledged receipt but had no immediate comment.

Helms headed the CIA — from 1966 until his appointment as ambassador to Iran in 1973. He has already been recalled twice from his post to testify before congressional committees on covert CIA activities, particularly in Chile.

THE ALCOHOL STRUGGLE

Several Approaches To Drying Out Task

By JEFF GREER
(Second of nine articles)

More than two dozen Marin and Sonoma county agencies — some with sharply differing policies — devote themselves to the necessary steps of drying out the drunkard, restoring the alcoholic to health, and rehabilitiating the alcoholic.

Numerically the largest program is Alcoholics Anonymous. It's the granddaddy of all existing organized efforts against alcoholism.

It believes that "one drunk talking with another drunk" is the best way to help an alcoholic stay sober; the goal is one dry day at a time, through the years.

AA members are anonymous and there are no membership rosters, but it is estimated that 1,200 to 2,000 men and women — almost equally divided — attend weekly meetings of 39 chapters in Marin and a similar number in Sonoma. The San Quentin chapter is the oldest prison chapter in the U.S.

Courts or other agencies may direct an alcoholic to AA, but the alcoholic must ask for help herself or himself — the first contact cannot come through an intermediary. A telephone call from the alcoholic to the AA's Intercounty Service Center in San Francisco (982-4473) will bring an AA member to visit.

AA offers no professional mental treatment, employment service or financial or housing aid; it concentrates on sobriety. That in turn changes the alcoholic's attitudes and behavior patterns, and solves the other problems, AA members say.

"Telephone therapy" and personal visits are available 24 hours a day whenever the alcoholic faces seeming crisis. AA is nonsectarian, but encourages

BETHLEHEM? BELLINGHAM? SAME TO YOUNG SHEPHERD

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — It was the Sunday before Christmas, the day of the Sunday School pageant at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and the big day for one very excited "shepherd."

The tow-headed boy told all who would listen about the trip which his family was taking to grandma's — a drive to Bellingham, Wash., to see all his cousins and trade Christmas gifts.

Then the boy would practice his pageant line:

"Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which has come to pass."

All was finally ready and voices were stilled as the pageant began with a manger scene. Then came the angels and shepherd, and the tow-headed younster delivered his line:

"Now let's all go up to Bellingham and see what's going on."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Royal Family's Party Trimmed

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth's traditional New Year's party won't be quite as majestic as usual.

Elizabeth

Buckingham Palace said the party would be trimmed because the Royal Family will be staying in an eight-bedroom farm house instead of Sandringham House, where they usually pass the New Year.

Sandringham, 100 miles north of London, is closed temporarily for renovations that will make it more economical to operate.

The farmhouse on the Sandringham estate will be large enough to accommodate the Queen, Prince Philip, Prince Charles, Prince Andrew and Prince Edward.

Ethiopian Battle

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — Heavy fighting broke out Sunday night in the northern Ethiopian city of Asmara and in Assab, apparently between Eritrean guerrillas and government troops. Calm was reported today.

At least five persons were killed and 36 wounded in Asmara, according to hospital authorities in the nation's second largest city.

IRA Demands

DUBLIN (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army said today it would extend its 11-day Christmas cease-fire if the British government meets three basic demands. If not, it said, the bombing blitz in Britain will escalate.

A spokesman said the demands are the confining of British troops to their barracks in Northern Ireland, a declaration of intent to withdraw them altogether from the province, and an end to internment, the arrest and detention of suspects without charge.

Warship Blast

HASTINGS, England (UPI) — An explosion today started a fire aboard the 9,000-ton Argentinian warship Candido de la Sala six miles off the south coast of England.

A Royal Air Force spokesman said five crewmen were injured. They were taken off the tank-landing ship and flown to hospital by RAF helicopter.

The ship has a crew of 17 officers and 30 seamen.

Bombs Usher Truce

LONDON (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army's holiday cease-fire got off to a shaky start today in the wake of a night of violence that included a bombing attack on the home of Opposition leader Edward Heath in London.

Police and army spokesmen reported all quiet following nine bomb explosions in Northern Ireland and one in Britain, three attacks against British troops in Ulster and the fatal shooting of a Protestant woman in a Belfast pub.

The 11th-hour show of strength ushered in the first truce since 1972 in the religious strife that has killed 1,141 persons in Ulster and 52 in Britain.

Oil Takeover Set

BEIRUT (UPI) — The tiny Persian Gulf sheikhdom of Qatar has announced plans to take over the two principal foreign oil companies operating within its borders and nationalize all the country's petroleum resources.

Oil Minister Abdel Aziz ben Khalifa Al-Thani said yesterday the Qatari government would begin negotiations immediately with the Qatar Petroleum Co. and the Shell Co. of Qatar on the terms of the takeover.

South Africa's Aims

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller has promised a campaign to end racial discrimination in white supremacist South Africa in pursuit of detente with the nation's black neighbors.

He also urged the United Nations to stop interfering in the region's problems, which he said could be peacefully settled by its own people.

In a review of 1974 policies, Muller yesterday predicted expanded South African contacts with black Africa and major changes in the region's map by next year.

"We shall not hesitate to do away with humiliating practices which harm good relations between white and non-white," Muller said.

He said white and black leaders in southern Africa have been "earnestly and honestly trying to resolve burning questions" while militants in the United Nations have vied to "push through condemnatory resolutions against us."

Recount Surrender

CONCORD, N. H. (UPI) — Democrat John Durkin stood alone and exhausted in the marble State House corridor and said he was through arguing his case on the state level.

Rep. Louis C. Wyman, R-N.H., will be New Hampshire's next U.S. senator — unless the Democrat-controlled U.S. Senate decides to reverse the state's choice.

Durkin's 11-month battle for the office has taken its toll of the tenacious attorney and former state insurance commissioner.

"If the Senate decides to take Wyman, I will just go back to practicing law," said Durkin, 38.

Congress Said Ready To Kill Plan To Cut Food Stamp Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., says Congress is prepared to kill an administration plan to cut $325 million from the federal food stamp program and to increase the cost of stamps.

"It is my opinion that an overwhelming majority of the Congress will support legislation to prevent this action from taking place if such legislation should still be necessary when Congress returns in January," McGovern said on behalf of a group of 42 senators.

The lawmakers sent a letter to food stamp program director R. Royal Shipp yesterday urging the Agriculture Department to withdraw proposed increases for food stamps scheduled to take effect March 1.

The increases would double the cost of food stamps for some recipients and force others to pay up to 30 per cent of their income for stamps.

The average food stamp payment is currently 23 per cent.

Earlier, 72 House members lodged a similar complaint about the increases. Congress' Joint Economic Committee recommended Saturday that the government make food stamps more available as part of new welfare reforms.

"There are many ways to fight inflation in this country that make economic and social sense," the senators said, "but cutting the food stamp bonus and risking increased hunger to thousands of American families makes no sense at all."

Coal Production Back To Normal

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The country's soft coal production returned to normal for the first time in six weeks today following ratification by 4,500 mine construction workers of a new three-year wage contract.

The construction workers, whose picketing activities had closed coal mines in several states the past two weeks, accepted the contract by a 2-1 margin in secret ballot voting during the weekend, the United Mine Workers said in Washington yesterday.

The construction workers had picketed mines since Dec. 9, when the UMW's 120,000 miners began returning to work under a new three-year contract which ended their 24-day strike. The miners had walked out Nov. 12.

For the first time since then, no pickets were reported today at any mine, even in Pennsylvania where the Western Pennsylvania Coal Haulers Association had threatened to throw up picket lines.

The association, which represents 2,000 drivers and 150 firms, has refused to sign a pact negotiated by the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association that would charge them a royalty on coal hauled.

The truckers say the agreement is inequitable to the trucking industry.

However, UMW sources are apparently not worried about a truckers' strike. "For all intents and purposes you're going to see full scale production," they said.

Mine construction union leaders were generally pleased with their new contract, hammered out in Washington after the UMW reached agreement Dec. 9 on a new contract for 120,000 soft coal miners.

The miners began returning to work two weeks ago after ratifying a new three-year contract with BCOA. But the mine contruction workers walked out and set up picket lines halting production in many areas until their own contract was negotiated.

UWM officials said more than 50,000 miners refused to cross their picket lines.

Illegal Airport Strike In Montreal Is Ended

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal Airport maintenance workers were back on the job today, ending their five day illegal walkout.

An airport spokesman said the workers reported for both the midnight and 8 a.m. shifts.

"Everybody's back at work," the spokesman said. "Everything's normal again."

The men voted last night by a 75 per cent margin to end their strike, which centered around new contract wage demands.

The 275 workers, including snow removal crews, walked off the job at midnight Tuesday to press demands for wage parity with their municipal counterparts. The airport, which handles 30,000 to 40,000 passengers daily during the peak holiday period, shut down Wednesday due to snow and icy conditions but reopened Thursday.

The maintenance workers, members of the Canadian Union of Transport Employes, which is affiliated with the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC), are demanding wage parity with municipal workers who reportedly earn 80 cents to $1 an hour more than the $3 hourly average of airport workers.

Washington Winds Derail Freight Cars

VANTAGE, Wash. (UPI) — Trains were rolling again today over a mile-long trestle spanning the Columbia River where 23 cars were blown over the side by heavy winds.

Gusts clocked at up to 54 miles per hour rocked the loaded railway cars until the momentum toppled them early Saturday, damaging the trestle and spilling cargo into the river.

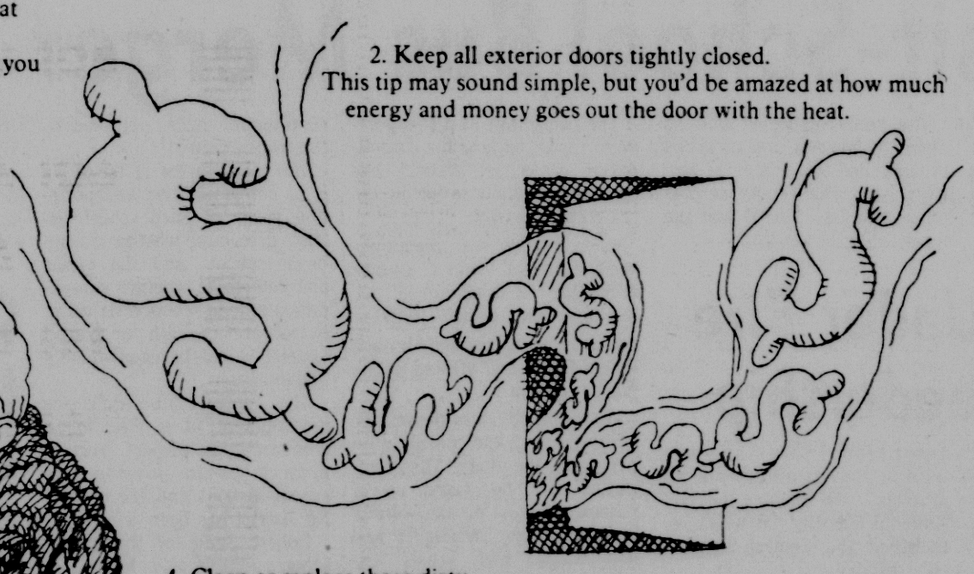
7 WAYS TO KEEP WARMER, CHEAPER.

Because our costs for fuel have gone up, your fuel costs are higher this winter than last, too. But even with increased rates, you can still hold down your heating costs by decreasing your energy usage. Here are some practical "here's hows."

1. Set your furnace thermostat to a temperature of 68° or lower. Turn it down even more when you leave home or go to bed.

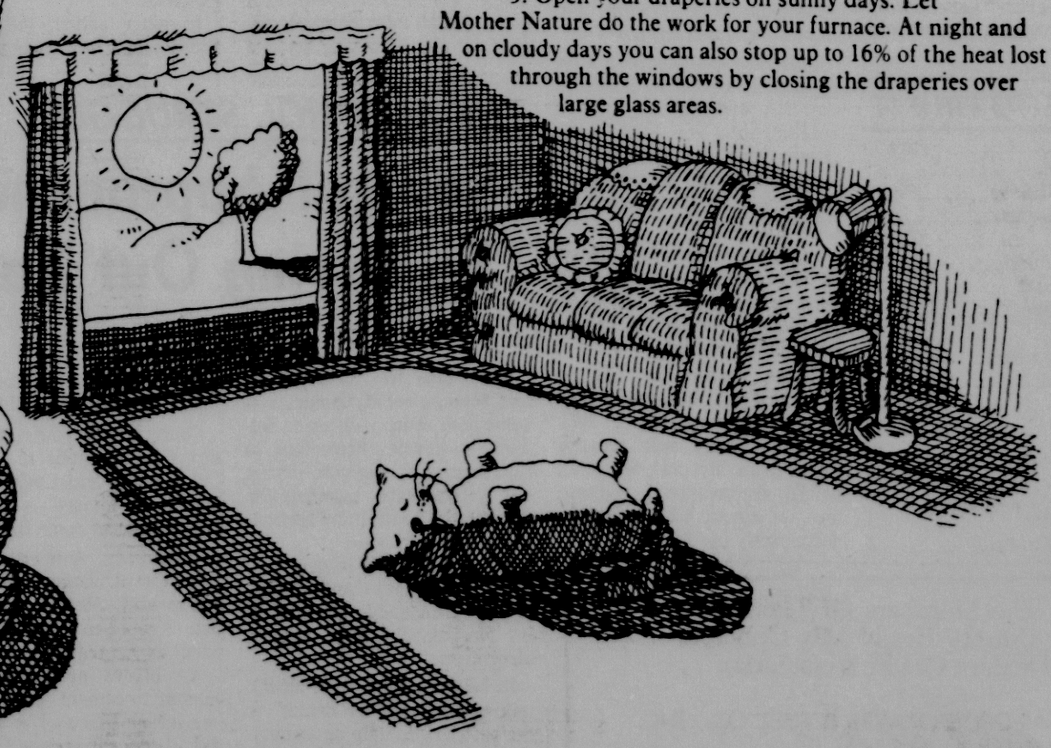
2. Keep all exterior doors tightly closed. This tip may sound simple, but you'd be amazed at how much energy and money goes out the door with the heat.



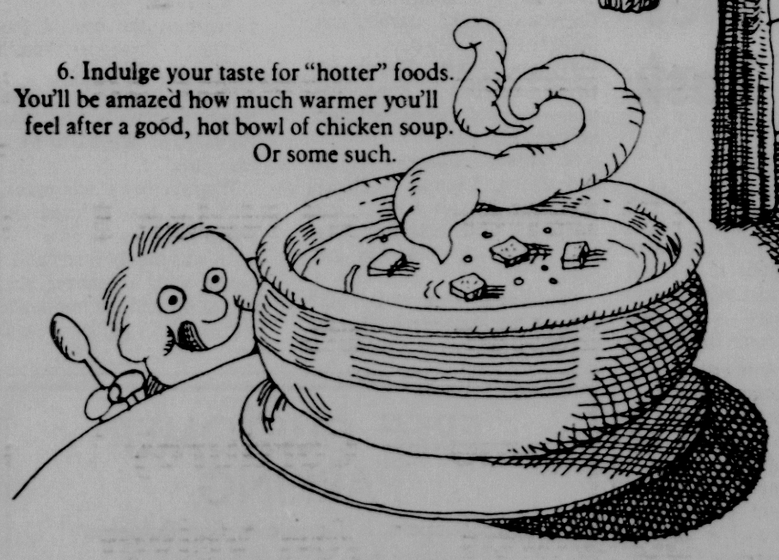
3. Drag out Aunt Lucy's homemade sweater. Remember the cable knit you thought was really knit out of cables? It can actually help at lower thermostat settings.

4. Clean or replace those dirty filters that make the furnace work harder than necessary to heat your home.

5. Open your draperies on sunny days. Let Mother Nature do the work for your furnace. At night and on cloudy days you can also stop up to 16% of the heat lost through the windows by closing the draperies over large glass areas.



6. Indulge your taste for "hotter" foods. You'll be amazed how much warmer you'll feel after a good, hot bowl of chicken soup. Or some such.



7. When you're not using the fireplace, close the damper. Why let your heat escape up a flue that can't appreciate it?

Mitchell Bugging Knowledge Denied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The defense lawyer for former Attorney General John N. Mitchell charged today that former White House aides Charles W. Colson and Jeb Stuart Magruder authorized the 1972 Watergate bugging.

William G. Hundley, Mitchell's chief lawyer, denied prosecution charges at the Watergate cover-up trial that Mitchell approved the intelligence gathering plan leading to the break-in at Democratic National Headquarters.

Instead, Hundley heaped the blame on the two White House aides and charged they also had attempted to make Mitchell the "fall guy" during the alleged cover-up.

Mitchell was the second defendant to present final arguments in what could be the final week of the trial. Earlier, H.R. Haldeman's lawyer, Frank Strickler, said that his client was so busy with his White House duties he had no time to cover up the "pimple" of Watergate.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica said the jury wanted to recess over Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, and thus final arguments will not be completed until Thursday at the earliest.

Hundley, head of the Justice Department's organized crime division during the Kennedy administration, gestured frequently with his left hand as he contended that in all the White House tapes played for the jury, Mitchell was on only one.

"He was going to be the fall guy," Hundley said. "That was the agreement. John Mitchell was going to be the fall guy. He had been marked for extinction on March 21, 1973," the day President Richard M. Nixon was informed of the full story of Watergate.

Hundley argued that during the three meetings at which the intelligence gathering plan of G. Gordon Liddy, later convicted as a Watergate mastermind, were discussed Mitchell turned down the scheme each time. Then Hundley sought to place the blame for the approval on others.

"That is, Mr. Charles Colson, working with Magruder and perhaps others I will not comment on," he said.

After Magruder and Liddy struck out with Mitchell, Hundley said, they went to gain approval of the bugging to "the mover and shaker, the loose cannon, brother Colson."

Strickler said in his final presentation that 'Watergate was no more than a pimple on the mound of his (Haldeman's) other duties.

Dam Builders Helped To Defeat Prop. 17

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Three contractors for the New Melones Dam pumped $200,000 into the campaign to defeat Prop. 17, the "wild rivers initiative" to halt construction of the giant earth dam on the Stanislaus River.

Campaign spending reports made public Saturday showed that the contractors poured $175,000 of the money into the battle in the final few weeks before the measure was rejected by voters on Nov. 5.

Incomplete reports showed that opponents raised at least $340,000 while supporters of the initiative — primarily raft trip operators — garnered more than $172,000.

Spending for the other 16 ballot measures totaled about $150,000.

A statement filed by "Melones Contractors" showed the joint venture organization to defeat Prop. 17 was made of George Atkinson Co., Gordon Bail and Arendell Corp.

The group donated $25,000 before Oct. 22 and $150,000 after that statement filing date to win approval of the proposed federal dam project.

The Atkinson Company, a San Francisco-based general contractor, also donated another $25,000. Most of the smaller contributions for the campaign against Prop. 17 came from ranchers in the Modesto, Stockton and Manteca area near the proposed dam. Included was a $26,500 loan from John Hertle of Modesto.

The state Building Contractor Trade Council donated $5,000 and the Construction Industry Advancement Fund, a building trade association, contributed $10,000 to defeat the measure.

The measure, which would have declared a nine-mile stretch of the river as "wild and scenic," was rejected by 53 per cent of the voters.

Supporters of the measure got the bulk of their contributions by selling tickets for raft rides down the whitewater stretch, as well as from donors from around the state that included unsuccessful democratic gubernatorial candidate William Matson Roth.

Oldest Active Copter Pilot Killed In Crash

AUBURN, Calif. (UPI) — George Roades Grimshaw, 84, the oldest active helicopter pilot in the nation and perhaps the world, was killed in a crash when thick fog prevented him from reaching his personal landing pad.

Grimshaw, who took up helicopter flying five years ago as a hobby, died instantly Saturday night when his craft knifed through a grove of oak trees, crashed to the ground and exploded in flames.

Authorities said he was heading for a nearby airport after unsuccessfully trying to land at his landing pad.

A lifelong miner and contractor, Grimshaw used his helicopter to oversee business interests and to help the Placer County sheriff's department conduct searches for persons lost in the Sierra Nevada mountains.

Grimshaw, who prefered flying to driving because "it's safer," once was presented with a plaque by his instructor saying, "Congratulations to my oldest and boldest student."

OVER 30 YEARS EXPERIENCE IN NUTRITION

A SPECIAL PRAYER

This holiday thought was sent to us from the Independent Citizens Research Foundation. We think it says it all — and beautifully, so we're sharing it with you:

"Believing life to be infinitely precious, may we learn the art of ennobling it and the techniques of preserving it so that each of us, in his own way, may contribute to more sanity, more health, more beauty in the art of living in the year ahead!" From all of us to all of you. Diane, Bill, Donna, Kathy, Debbie, Alexandria, Mike, Mary, Steve, Howie and June.

Some Strikes In Nation Ending But Many Are Still Off Jobs

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Dock workers in Boston are expected to return to work today, ending a two-week work stoppage, while West Coast longshoremen will hold contract talks with the maritime industry.

In Houston, striking bus drivers have voted to accept a new contract ending a 46-day-old bus strike and putting the city's buses back into operation with only two shopping days left until Christmas.

Elsewhere, 800 bus drivers and street car operators remained off the job in New Orleans, and a hospital in Quincy, Mass., made a "final offer" to 246 nurses who quit in a pay dispute.

The Boston dock workers returned to work under a temporary contract, accepted over the weekend. About 1,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association walked off their jobs two weeks ago after negotiations had failed to produce a contract.

West Coast longshoremen and the Pacific Maritime Association were to meet in San Francisco to renegotiate their current contract.

Some 50,000 longshoremen are employed along the Pacific Coast.

Houston bus drivers voted 695-70 in favor of the new agreement, reached Friday. Details of the contract were not announced.

In New Orleans, the transit workers' strike has stranded an estimated 370,000 bus and street car riders.

World Nears Christmas With Mingled Hope, Fear

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

From the tense Middle East to the steaming jungles of Southeast Asia, the world prepared Monday to celebrate Christmas in mingled hope and fear.

Pope Paul, in one of his gloomiest Christmas messages, told the College of Cardinals in Vatican City the "specter of terror" in the Middle East, Ireland and Vietnam confronts a world "floundering on the edge of the abyss."

"...We must rekindle the flame, the inspiration of the charity of Christ and rewaken in the world the sense of brotherhood," he said.

In Jordan, Israeli soldiers mounted the tightest security precautions ever for pilgrims visiting the Holy Land, including unprecedented body searches of persons entering for Christmas midnight mass Tuesday.

In Britain and Northern Ireland, the Irish Republican Army started an 11-day Christmas cease-fire. It said it would be extended if Britain moves to restrict its troops in Ulster and promises eventually to remove them.

In Northern Ireland itself, thousands of Catholics and Protestants mingled in the streets to shop during the cease-fire.

In Rome, the neo-Fascist Black Order sent a note emblazoned with a a swastika to the ANSA news agency threatening to bomb churches on Christmas Day unless the Catholic Church agrees to distribute its vast wealth among the people.

THE ALCOHOL STRUGGLE

members to believe in a God.

Nationwide, AA leaders estimate that 60 per cent of its members stay sober for one year after joining, and 40 per cent for two years or more. Membership represents every walk of life, race and creed.

AA calls itself the only public health agency without funding from any source. It operates strictly by voluntary manpower from its members, and by passing the hat at chapter meetings, where the average per capita donation is 40 cents.

"When the drunk dries up, he also tightens up," one veteran member joked.

A newer aid to the recovering alcoholic is the local residential program, an in-community replacement for the old, long-term confinements to Napa and Mendocino state hospitals. Examples are Turning Point, a halfway house for women, and The Lodge, primarily for men, both in San Rafael.

The Lodge is available by medical referral only. It provides a 30-day recovery program of food, shelter and supportive efforts in a peer-group home atmosphere, according to Don Purdy, director.

Residents must arrive detoxified, able to walk and reasonably sound of mind. The program, heavily oriented to AA, is designed to "bankrupt the alibis of the alcoholic" for his or her drunkeness and show them "there must be a better way" than excusing themselves into continued drinking and eventually jail or mental hospital.

Fifteen of the state-licensed Lodge's 25 beds are under contract to the Marin County alcohol recovery program at a fee of $17.50 a day, as compared with the approximate $40 a day cost to the county for state hospitalization of an alcoholic.

The Orenda Center in Santa Rosa functions similarly for Sonoma County, and has extensive outpatient programs and counseling as well. There are other foundation and private recovery homes in Sonoma County.

The Synanon Foundation also works on a residential basis with alcoholics, though primarily with narcotics addicts.

The private Kentfield Hospital concentrates on curing the alcoholic's illnesses, whether drink-related or not. Once healthy again, the released patient can — if he or she wishes — obtain rehabilitation help elsewhere in the community, explains Dr. Jerry Burns, the hospital's director.

The 27-bed facility treats 800 to 900 patients a year, paid mostly through medical insurance.

It is not a detoxification center, Burns stressed, but may have to sober up a patient to begin other treatment.

Patients who feel they cannot leave the bottle alone may request antabuse — a medication that nauseates them when they drink.

The hospital formely treated pateints for the county alcohol recovery program, but stopped because of difficulty in collecting payments due, Burns reported.

Relatively few of his patients seem to have any families left, the hospital official said.

But many other programs focus on the spouses and children of the alcoholic in Marin and Sonoma.

Vaccination clinics will continue until further notice Monday through Friday, 1 to 4 p.m., at 920 Grand Avenue in San Rafael.

No laboratory-confirmed cases of flu have been reported this winter in Marin, but cases have been reported in Berkeley, Pacifica and Yuba City, signaling the start of the flu season, according to health officials.

The money would be used to "provide bus service within five minutes' walk for most of Marin's residents," Hardcastle said.

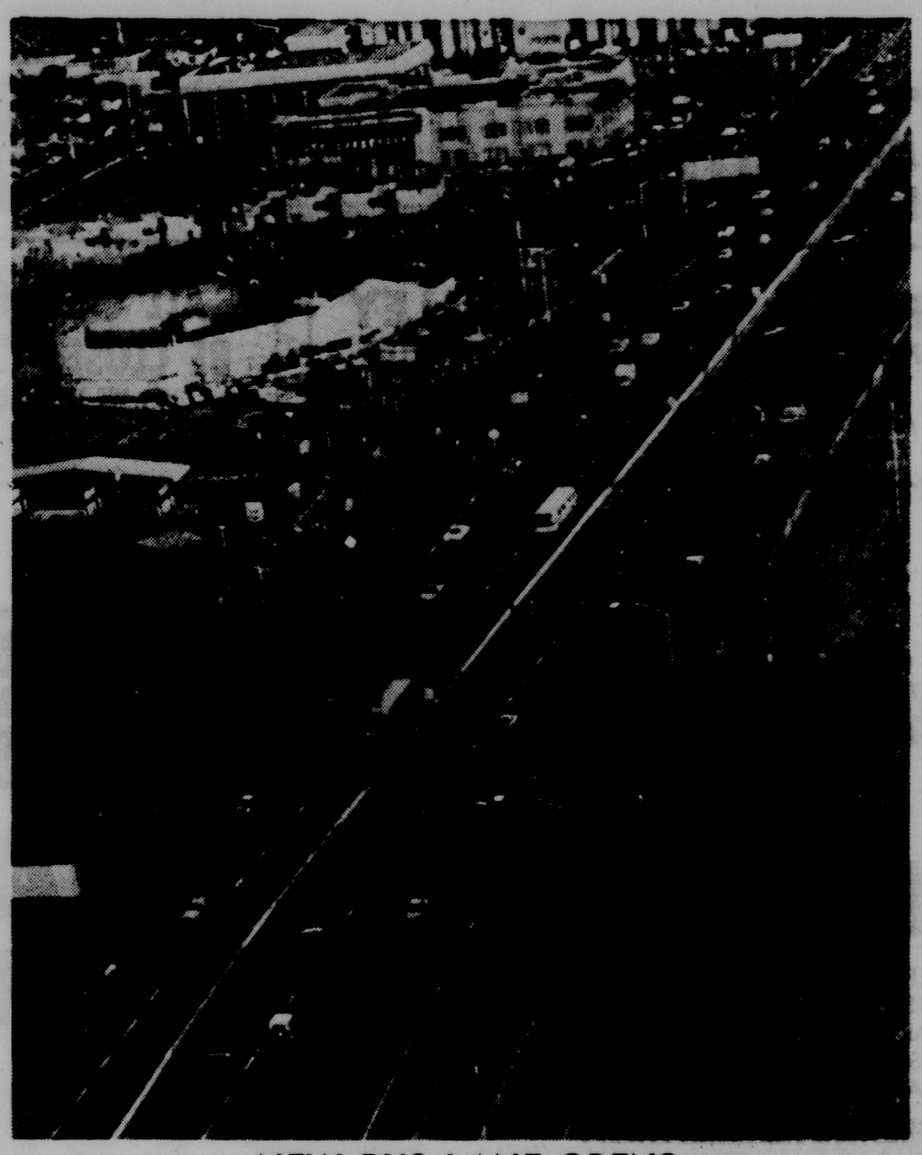
Regular commute Routes 8 to Tiburon and 24 to Greenbrae-San Anselmo will leave from Natomas Street as buses fill up. All buses will operate via the Civic Center Route until 4 p.m., when commute service will resume via the financial district.

Unfriendly Dog Bites St. Nick

NASHUA, Iowa (UPI) — Santa Claus has scratched at least one potential gift recipient from his list — a German shepherd who bit him in the leg.

Police Chief Doug Strike went to the Bill Dunn home dressed in his Santa suit to deliver some gifts. When he stepped out of his car, the dog bit him.

"I don't think we'll give any presents to that dog this year," he said.



NEW BUS LANE OPENS

Three southbound Golden Gate Transit buses (center of photo) head down a newly-constructed freeway lane on Highway 101, as observed from a California Highway Patrol helicopter hovering over Corte Madera today. The lane, from Greenbrae to the Richardson Bay Bridge, which opened today, is reserved for bus use weekdays from 6 to 9 a.m. Similarly, the inside northbound lane is set aside for buses from 4 to 7 p.m. At other hours and on weekends, all traffic may use the lanes. Salvation Army Pots Clang Emptily

The Christmas spirit is running afoul of the economic facts of life this year. The losers will be the poor.

The season this time is marked by recession and increasingly long unemployment lines, and there are fewer coins for the street corner Santas and the kettle ladies.

A survey showed this weekend that this has been a year of record donations from businesses and workers, but independent charities who depend purely on holiday cheer to tide them over are taking it on the chin across the country.

The complication is, more families are asking for help. The dimes and dollars have to be spread further. Toy collections help, but they, too, are down this year.

One Salvation Army official in Northern California explained: "They don't have the money. It's not a question of not wanting to give. A lot of people are out of work. They are needing help themselves...."

The American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, which advises charities and hospitals, said this year's contributions are expected to top by $1 billion 1973's $24.6 billion.

The United Fund, which solicits its money from corporations and through payroll deductions, said contributions were up 10 per cent from last year.

But the situation was grim for the independent charities:

In Northern California, the Salvation Army said response to its annual Christmas appeal was down 20 per cent from last year, and amounts from individuals are down as much as 50 per cent.

Detroit has been hit hard by layoffs in the automotive industry, and the Salvation Army there said donations were down 30 per cent.

In Baltimore, Santa Claus Anonymous, which collects money to provide Christmas toys for poor children, said it had received only 10 per cent of what it needs.

The Salvation Army in New Orleans said contributions were down 15 per cent, and that more families were asking for help. Gordon Leblanc, leader of the New Orleans Times-Picayune Doll and Toy Fund, said donations were "about $3,000 less this year, and toys have gone up about 40 per cent."

In New York City, holiday giving was up and down throughout the various boroughs. Manhattan dwellers were giving more than last year, but donations were lagging in Brooklyn, Staten Island and Queens.

In Los Angeles, charities reported there were good indications the last few days of nickles, dimes and dollars in the pot before Christmas would be enough.

Cincinnati Salvation Army Maj. Donald Nathan summed it up: "We've got a lot of people asking for help. They want food and clothing. We're trying to do more with less money. I'm not at all sure we'll be able to match what was donated last year."

But Maj. Gordon A. Spicer of the Salvation Army in Detroit remained optimistic. He said he believed the lateness of Thanksgiving and a record snowfall hurt the appeal, but that "people are generous with what they have."

In Portland, Ore., Maj. Velma Burnie of the Volunteers of America said street corner kettle collections were running $100-$150 a day less than usual.

There was an exception, she said: "Collections are holding up well at the locations in front of liquor stores."

Fire Hospitalizes Home Caretaker

An early morning blaze today at the T.C. Lindsay residence, 10 Rancho Drive, Mill Valley, sent the caretaker to Marin General Hospital for smoke inhalation.

The Alto-Richardson Bay Fire Department responded to the call at 3:08 a.m. in which the interior of the house sustained considerable damage.

While there was no estimate of damage, firemen said the blaze may have been caused by faulty electrical wiring.

The caretaker, Bominador Inocencio was listed in fair condition, according to hospital spokesmen. Mrs. Lindsay was also checked for smoke inhalation.

Firemen also said that four dogs and a cat perished due to the intense smoke.

Tiny Tim's Christmas Is Best Yet

Tiny Tim's Christmas, which saw food, toys and clothing presented to some 400 Marin families Saturday and yesterday was termed the most successful effort in the five years it has been operating in the county.

Needy families, who came by appointment, to a huge old Purity store building in Mill Valley, were given turkeys and hams as well as canned goods for their Christmas dinner.

New toys, many of them donated by Sears, were handed out, along with repaired toys collected at fire stations and delivered by Marine Corps reservists, according to Bob Collins, who headed the program again this year.

While waiting, families were entertained by puppet shows and singers from Bread Roses and cartoon shows. In something of a switch, those receiving also gave. Many of them provided the cookies served as refreshments, Collins said.

Community Action Marin donated $7,000 to the program, Collins said, which paid all the overhead costs and also bought the turkeys and hams.

Canned goods came from many donors, with large quantities having been collected by Terra Linda High and Ross school students, according to Collins.

From the Salvation Army came rugs for the floor, clothing racks and Christmas decorations and lights.

When the two-day program ended, a few toys remained, Collins said. These will be donated today to a similar program in San Francisco, where 8,000 applicants have been received for assistance.

Anise Turina Files For Council Seat

Anise M. Turina, a member of San Rafael's citizens advisory committee on redevelopment, today filed for election to the San Rafael City Council.

Mrs. Turina, 47, is the third resident to file for election to a council seat. At stake are the seats of councilmen John A. Miskimen and Fred E. Jensen. Jensen and planning commissioner John A. Starkweather have filed. Miskimen has taken out papers.

Others who have taken out papers for a council seat are Richard C. Fox, Peter K. Kehrlein, Norris M. Rawles and Edward Bott. Filing closes at noon Thursday.

Mrs. Turina said she is running for election because "I want to be a part of the decision making body . . . My whole purpose is purely because of my interest in San Rafael."

Said Mrs. Turina: "I think I can bring (the council) balance. I don't intend to side with any particular faction, group or geographical area . . . I have absolutely no conflicts of interest."

She also said she is honest, frank and forward — "I'm not afraid to speak my mind" — and described her sex as an asset. "I'm fair and intuitive . . . It doesn't hurt for a group of men to have a woman around," she said of the council.

She called city redevelopment plans a major issue, and said she supported a proposal for two or three large department stores at the foot of Fourth Street near Highway 101. "It wouldn't really be tearing up the city too much — there's not a lot there that needs to be saved," she said.

She warned that San Rafael might "die on the vine" unless major new retailers are attracted to the city. She said that the scale of new development downtown must be carefully controlled.

"I'm all for getting new tax revenue in the city without burdening the property owner," she said.

Mrs. Turina called for a mall downtown that provides for both pedestrians and traffic, and said more off-street parking is needed.

She described herself as a "social reformer," saying she is concerned with housing needs "not only in the city but in the county." She said provision of low and moderate-income housing is not impossible since there are "lots of ways it can be financed." She said she supports density bonuses for developers who provide open space and low-income housing units.

ANISE M. TURINA
Files for council

She said she opposes an open space assessment district as proposed by the Santa Margarita Homeowners Association. "I don't think an assessment district should be formed if there are so many people who oppose it," she said, noting the community is bitterly divided on the issue. "If they don't want it, they shouldn't be taxed for it."

She said she is "sympathetic" toward the plight of the small businessman in San Rafael.

Mrs. Turina, who last fall sparked a probe of a city police raid on a teen-age party in Terra Linda, said the department is "doing fine . . .I don't really have any criticism of the police."

Mrs. Turina, a native of Arizona, is a 12-year resident of the city. She holds a bachelor's degree in education from the University of Arizona. She also attended Golden Gate Law School.

She has worked as a teacher and is a former member of the city citizens committee on the general plan, and the centennial committee.

She is past deacon of Christ Presbyterian Church in Terra Linda and is a member of Islam Temple, Shrine of the Scottish Rite.

She is also a member of the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, the Retired Officers Wives, and the Terra Linda High School Parents-Teachers Association. She is a member of the Marin General Hospital Foundation Board and the New Voter Education Research Foundation.

She lives at 4 Dias Way with her husband, Joseph, a district manager for State Farm Insurance. The couple has two children.

Wornum Given Committee Post

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Newly-elected Assemblyman Michael Wornum, D-Mill Valley, has been named vice chairman of the Assembly Resources and Land Use Committee by Assembly Speaker Leo T. McCarthy, D-San Francisco.

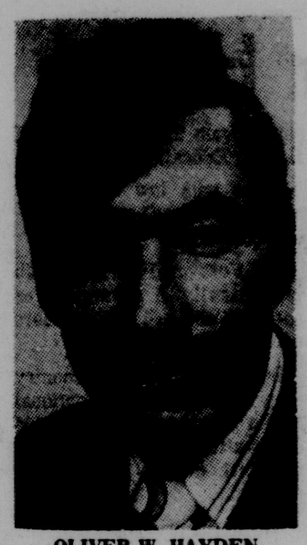
Wornum, a former Marin County supervisor and an architect, said he was pleased with the assignment in a field in which he has had professional and governmental experience.

He also will serve on the Local Government and Transportation committees and earlier was appointed to the Select Committee on Coastal Zone Resources.

Radio KTIM Gets New Manager

A new manager with 20 years of radio experience took over KTIM radio today, but the radio programs and staff members will remain unchanged.

Oliver W. Hayden, who now lives in Moraga in Contra Costa County, succeeded Robert Dinsmore of Ignacio, who has been with KTIM for nine years, the last two and one-half years as manager. Dinsmore will stay on with KTIM for the rest of this month to help the new manager, then join Far Eastern Affairs with offices in Tokyo, Hong Kong, and Taipei as executive vice president for the United States. Far Eastern Affairs purchases and sells commodities such as boxes for packaging and electronic parts.



OLIVER W. HAYDEN
New KTIM manager

Hayden, the new manager, said he will keep the same programs and format for both FM and AM stations. "I plan no changes at this time, but I don't make any promises for the future."

Hayden has been in the radio business since 1954, serving with various stations throughout the country. The last two and one-half years, he was with KRE radio in Berkeley, where he was vice president and general manager until June this year. Before that, he was with CBS for eight years including four years with KCBS in San Francisco.

No newcomer to Marin, Hayden lived in Tiburon from 1962 to 1964 and again from 1968 to 1971 while working for CBS. He plans to move to Marin with his wife, Penny, and their two children.

Novato Plans Winter Trips

Two winter trips for students has been scheduled by the Novato Parks and Recreation Department.

A snow trip to Bumble Bee Hill in the Sierras for junior high school students will be held Jan. 2, with the registration deadline Friday.

A weekend ski trip to Squaw Valley for persons 13 to 18 years of age will be held Jan. 24-26. Registration deadline is Jan. 19. The trip will be limited to 90 persons and they will be chosen on a first come, first served basis.

Welfare Dads Bill Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress gave final approval to a bill Friday giving Internal Revenue agents the power to locate and collect support payments from welfare fathers who have deserted their families.

The bill, approved by voice vote in both houses, will also permit the courts to attach the wages of federal and military personnel for family support payments.

Sponsors of the legislation it costs the government about $1 billion a year to support families deserted by the father.

Murder Indictment Is Returned

Marin's Grand Jury today returned a murder indictment against Jack William Martin, accusing him of shooting his business partner.

Martin, 46, will be arraigned next Monday in the death of Paul Lee Graham, 52. Superior Court Judge David Menary Jr. set bail at $100,000.

Friends of Martin and Graham have told sheriff's department investigators that the two men had been despondent over their business, Angel Creamery in Corte Madera, which had been losing money, and apparently made a suicide pact.

Graham was found dead Dec. 15 at the Bel Marin Keys home he shared with Martin. A .25-caliber bullet was in his head. Martin was arrested a short time later.

Today's indictment headed off a preliminary hearing which had been scheduled Jan. 14.

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said he did not allege the special conditions which are necessary to support a request for the death penalty.

Christmas Wish From Pope Paul

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI wished the world a Merry Christmas yesterday and said the best way to enjoy the holiday is to help other people.

"We advance to you and to all the Church and the world our season's greetings," the 77-year-old pontiff told a noontime crowd in St. Peter's Square.

"No one can truly enjoy Christmas without making happy, at least a little, someone who in these blessed days might need bread, or work, or a home, or care, or friendship, or comfort, or faith," he added.

Jimmy 'The Greek' Granted Pardon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The odds must have been against it, but President Ford yesterday granted a full pardon to Las Vegas oddsmaker Jimmy "the Greek" Snyder.

Snyder, whose real name is James G. Synodinos, was sentenced to five years probation and a $10,000 fine in Nevada 11 years ago after he was convicted of interstate transportation of bets and wagering information.

Five-Year Health Priorities Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government report says the way to better health for Americans over the next five years may be through better housing and safer working conditions.

The report envisions spending about $25 billion from now until 1980 to curb tooth decay, begin projects to cope with mental health hazards, and build better hospital facilities for those who are financially distressed.

"Poor health is, in considerable part at least, the result of the low incomes of individuals rather than its cause," said the report from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Those with low incomes, it added, have less access to medical and mental health care.

The Forward Plan for Health is basically a strategy for spending about $5 billion dollars each year through 1980.

But it also says the country may not be ready for national health insurance and that too much attention has been given to heart disease and cancer research.

Among its priorities:

An $8 million national fluoridation program to curb tooth decay.

New mental health projects to cope with "such social stresses as the influence of violence on television, racism, crime and delinquency, poverty and suicide."

A multimillion dollar drive to reduce by 10 per cent cancer contracted on the job and because of the job.

A redirection of federal construction funds toward health facilities treating patients who do not require expensive beds and on modernizing big city hospitals.

But giving everyone access to poor or highly variable health care through a national health insurance scheme "would be a hollow victory," it said.

HEW has developed a plan, announced by former President Richard M. Nixon, to require employers to offer health insurance to workers.

President Ford said he supported the idea but that "Congress will have to join with me in cutting federal expenditures before we can afford this program."

Although it concedes some type of insurance reform is likely, the blueprint is cautious.

Before a national health insurance plan can work, it said, the other problems of the report must be dealt with — escalating costs, shortages of medical workers in rural and slum areas, and poor state and local planning of hospitals and other medical facilities.

The plan also says research has been concentrated improperly on the nation's leading killers in diseases.

"Advances in fields such as immunology, virology, genetics, endocrinology and the molecular biology of disease hold the key to the lcok on many important health problems facing the nation today. Progress in these areas is essential, the document says.

Lion Thieves Abandon Cubs

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The thieves who stole two 5-month-old lion cubs apparently got more than they bargained for. Result: the cubs were safely home again today, at the Lion Country Safari.

Zoo manager Charles Durr said one was returned by a person who spotted it yesterday wandering along a road near West Palm Beach. The second recaptured by Lion County officials who searched the wooded area along the highway after the discovery of the first cub.

Durr said the 70-pound animals were apparently stolen late Friday night after a company party at the facility. Durr said the two cubs probably got to be too much for the bandits, who apparently decided to let them go.

GAZER'S GUIDE

Sun Is Looking A Little Larger

By Dr. Thomas D. Nicholson
Director, the American Museum of Natural History, New York

Jan. 2: The earth is at perihelion, the point in its orbit where it is nearest the sun. If you think the sun looks a little larger and brighter today, it is, not discernibly as compared to yesterday or tomorrow, but about 2 per cent larger than it appears in our sky in July. As you can tell by January's wintry temperatures, however, the nearer, larger, brighter sun has little effect on our weather.

Jan. 6: Saturn is at opposition, the place in the sky where it is opposite the sun as viewed from earth. The planet is in Gemini, rising and setting just before Pollux and Castor, the brightest stars of that constellation. It is also brighter than both stars — not by much, but enough to help distinguish it.

Since Saturn is almost opposite the sun, it rises as the sun sets, climbs to its highest position about midnight, and sets as the sun rises. If you have trouble identifying it, wait for the evening of Jan. 25, when the moon will be nearby and Saturn will be the nearest bright object to it.

Jan. 9-10: The crescent moon will help in locating Mars in the morning sky on these two dates. The planet will be below and to the left of the moon, in the southeastern sky around dawn on the morning of the 9th. On the 10th, the planet will be in the same place, but the moon will have shifted to the left (east); this will place Mars above and to the right of the moon.

Don't look for anything spectacular, however. Mars is now quite far from earth and not much brighter than the North Star. The brightest star in the area, Antares, in Scorpius, will be much more prominent than Mars, to its right and higher.

Jan. 13: This evening the early crescent moon first passes Mercury, then Venus just three hours later, but after all three have set. Not that it would make much difference if the conjunctions with the moon occurred earlier. The three objects, though technically in the evening sky, set before the sky darkens enough to see them.

Jan. 15: The moon is at apogee, farthest from earth this month.

Jan. 16-17: The bright object near the crescent moon in the southwestern sky after sundown in Jupiter. From one night to the next, you can easily see the moon shift from right to left (west to east) above the planet.

Except for the moon, Jupiter is the brightest object in our sky this winter, although the star Sirius, in Canis Major, comes close. You can find Sirius, by its brightness, well to the left of Jupiter, in the southeast.

Jan. 23: Mercury is at its greatest distance to the left of the sun (easterly elongation), which leaves it above the western horizon at sundown longer than at any other position. But this is a very unfavorable elongation, because Mercury is so far south in the sky. It is too low at sundown and in early evening twilight to be seen.

Jan. 25: Saturn and the moon move together across the sky tonight. When you first see them after sundown, they will be rising in the east, with the moon to the right and above the planet. But as they move toward the west, the moon will gradually shift closer, pass to the south of Saturn about 10:00 p.m., eastern standard time, and then separate from the planet to the east (left).

Jan. 28: The moon is at perigee, nearest to the earth.

Jan. 29: Since the 23rd Mercury has been shifting closer to the sun as its orbital motion takes it between sun and earth.

AFTER THE RESCUE — Amber Noel Pepples, 15 months old, wearily rubs her eyes as a hospital staff examines her following her ordeal in a well. The toddler spent four hours yesterday trapped in the hole, after falling in while accompanying her parents to a tomato field in Homestead, Fla.

(UPI Telephoto)

Toddler Rescued From Well Trap

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (UPI) — Fifteen-month-old Amber Noel Peeples was trapped in a six-foot deep, one-foot-wide irrigation well for four hours yesterday before rescue workers dug a parallel hole and freed her.

Amber fell into the uncapped well as she trailed her parents, Air Force Sgt. Harry Peeples, 21, and Joyce Peeples, 20, around a "pick-it-yourself" tomato field.

"I didn't hear her, that's why I turned around," Peeples said. "I turned around, then I heard her like she was in a hole or tangled up in the tomato vines."

Initial efforts by those at the scene to rescue the toddler failed. Tom Mills, who was about 10 feet behind the Peeples when the incident occurred, tried to rope the child but couldn't pull her out.

An 11-year-old boy tried to wiggle down into the narrow hole to reach the crying toddler, but had to be pulled out after his shoulders got stuck.

Police, firemen and volunteers finally managed to dig a larger hole adjacent to the well and chisel their way to the girl.

Five pumps were used to make sure the well didn't fill with water.

The little girl was rushed by helicopter to a hospital and released in less than two hours.

A similar accident in another field earlier led to passage of a county ordinance requiring the holes be covered and marked. However, several holes in the field where Amber fell yesterday were uncapped.

Emotional Acquittal In Stab Death Trial

Allen Junior ("Big Red") Henderson was acquitted in Marin Superior Court late Friday of manslaughter in the June 2 stabbing death of James C. McDonald.

In an emotional climax to the 16-day trial, several jurors wept openly as the not guilty verdict was returned in the courtroom of Judge E. Warren McGuire.

Henderson, 50, of Marin City, was arrested in the aftermath of a barroom brawl in which McDonald, 23, also of Marin City, was stabbed once in the heart.

Witnesses testified they saw Henderson and McDonald arguing at Smitty's Bar and Grill in Marin City, but no one said he saw the stabbing.

Henderson was released following his acquittal and was reported en route to Chicago to visit a sister.

New Record For Gold Markets

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Gold hit a record high of $192.25 per ounce in London today in a feverish pre-Christmas rush of bidding.

Gold had opened in London at $189.75 per ounce, up $1.75 from last Friday's closing rate of $188. The previous high, $191 an ounce, was Nov. 14.

In hectic trading the price reached $192.25 and was trying to edge above this, dealers said.

"America's reluctance to allow foreign governments to allow to bid in the Jan. 6 gold auction, and the Franco-Iranian agreement on revaluing France's gold reserves had given the metal a boost," a dealer for broker Samuel Montagu said.

Gold rose three dollars per ounce in Zurich to open at $189.75 today compared with $186.75 per ounce last Friday.

The dollar improved in Zurich to open at 2.5925 francs against Friday's 2.5825 francs.

But a year-end report from the Swiss Credit Bank said the franc had risen 25 per cent in value against the dollar this year. Since May, 1971, the effective revaluation of the franc against the dollar has been 45 per cent, the bank said.

The dollar also opened down against the West German mark, pegged at today's opening at 2.440 marks compared with Friday's 2.449 marks.

In Brussels the dollar was quoted at 37.25 francs, down two centimes from Friday.

A bigger drop was registered in Paris. The dollar opened at 4.485 francs against Friday's 4.517 francs. One banker said the drop did not represent any new weakness in the dollar but reflected slack demand in the Christmas holiday doldrums.

The pound sterling weakened slightly against the dollar, opening at $2.3265 dollars to the pound against Friday's $2.3295.

Two Held In East Bay After Reno Murders

SAN LEANDRO (UPI) — Two men described as transient workers were held here today on charges of a double murder in Reno, Nev., the police reported.

The wife and son of former Reno Mayor Len Harris were shot to death Tuesday in their home. Warrants were published for Robert Joseph Maginnis, 27, and Richard E. Mello, 21, and they were arrested yesterday in San Leandro.

Officers said the men surrendered without resistance and were awaiting extradition proceedings.

Maginnis also had been sought on a warrant charging him as an ex-felon in possession of a firearm and Mellow was awaiting prosecution on a forgery complaint, said Tom Benham, chief criminal deputy investigator in Reno.

Benham said his detectives had been working around the clock since Harris found his wife and son shot in his living room. Harris, now operator of a meat wholesale firm, said he had run there after hearing gunfire.

The younger Harris had an extensive gun collection which might have been a motive for the slayings, Benham said. Two automatic weapons stolen from the collection were recovered by sheriff's deputies the day after the slayings.

SELECTING GIFTS FOR MOM — Youngsters in the kindergarten at Neil Cummins School in Larkspur try out the gifts for Mom at a Holiday Store sponsored by parents of youngsters in the primary grades. The gifts come from family closets and were offered for sale to young shoppers who needed help with their gift lists. Here Jason Lewis tried out a perfume atomizer while Chandra Michael models a necklace with the help of store chairman Barbara Garcia. All gifts at this table cost 10 cents.

They All Know How To Keep Christmas

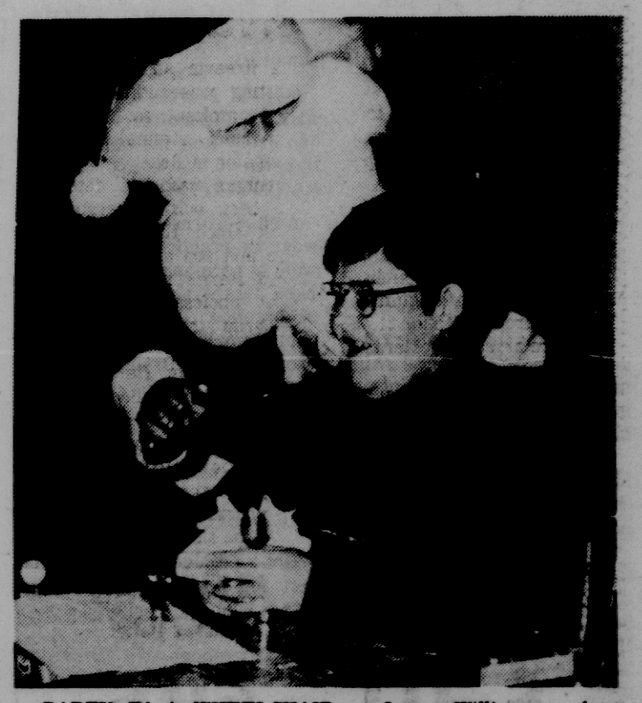
From Sausalito to Petaluma, from bay to ocean, the Christmas spirit is growing and growing.

Trees are being hauled off country hillsides and lots downtown. Lights are appearing on trees and doorways. Cars are arriving with dear ones from far away. And in the churches, pageants and choirs are in rehearsal for the holy day.

Two days before Christmas, shopping still is going on in every neighborhood shopping center, and the traffic snarls are worsening on Fourth Street, Bridgeway and Grant Avenue.

Many a gift is already under the tree, and the fixings are ready for egg nog, turkey and Santa's snack.

But part of Christmas is already a memory. Here, in photos, is a glimpse of some of the parties and preparations that were taking place around Marin as the world waited the stroke of a clock that marks the beginning of Christmas Day.



PARTY IN A WHEELCHAIR — James Williamson of Novato, 15, grins at a remark from Santa Claus (Sheriff's Deputy Ted Hughes) during party for 35 young muscular dystrophy patients held at Hamilton Air Force Base by the Marin-Sonoma Chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

FUN FOR SENIORS, TOO — Musical entertainment at the Funsters Christmas party was provided by the Sirenaders, members of Ignacio Pacheco Branch 22, Sons In Retirement. The Funsters are a senior citizens group sponsored by the Marinwood Community Center, where the party was held. The musicians entertain throughout the year for shut-ins, convalescents, handicapped persons and senior citizen groups.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Sponging Kin Expect Visitor To Bring Steaks For Dinner

DEAR HELEN:

My cousin has two children — and an awful crust!

They drop in on us without warning — never bring food or even a bottle, though her husband laps our liquor up, meanwhile making comments about "supermarket booze."

We live in the country, and they "like to get the kids away from city streets." They always stay for at least one meal. Now she's talking about sending her youngest out for a week next summer.

We hardly ever visit them, but last week we came in town for shopping. I called my cousin up the day before and she said "Stop over, we'll have a barbecue."

When we got there she asked, "Did you bring the steaks?" (She knows we have a freezer full of meat.) Turns out she'd only made a salad, so my husband went out and bought the rest of the dinner. This has happened before — which is why we hardly ever visit them.

They have as much money as we have. She's always showing off a new dress or bragging about new furniture.

Outside of causing a family feud, how can I put a barricade on this one-way street? — "CHINTZY'S" COUSIN

DEAR COUSIN:

Get flinty with "Chintzy!" When she and her family "drop in," tell 'em you're on your way out . . . or ask her to go shopping for you "since I can't thaw meat in time for dinner." And be firm about "no extra kids" next summer!

Polite put-offs won't start a feud. But hopefully, they'll send the moochers looking for a new easy mark. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Lately it seems that my deodorant and other spray cans "run out" awfully fast. So I tried an experiment. I weighed an empty deodorant can, then weighed a full one I'd just bought — same brand, same "net weight."

I discovered that there was only three and one-half ounces of fluid in a can labeled "four ounces." I bought a couple more just to test. Same short weight!

You may think a half ounce is too measly to worry about, but with deodorant around $1.30 a can, that's 15 cents lost on each purchase.

What bothers me is: this could happen with practically everything we buy. Who checks? . . . Except — LITTLE OLD WEIGHTWATCHER, ME

DEAR WEIGHTWATCHER:

The Bureau of Weights and Measures checks! And its investigators depend a lot on alert buyers who give them leads. But, don't forget there is a difference between liquid and solid weight.

Get thee to a phone book and make a "citizen's call." — H.

DEAR HELEN:

As a high school math teacher, I must answer "Brain Drained's" letter, about school homework.

A child learns to walk by walking. The mother who grabs him every time his wobbly legs threaten to cause a tumble is HANDICAPPING him.

A child learns math the same way: by practice. Thus, homework is necessary. Coaches and band teachers know the value of practice. Parents don't do their work for them. Why should Brain Drained do her child's homework?

The word is: LET the child do it! Any child smart enough to con his mother into doing his homework is smart enough to do it himself. — M.E.C.

YOUNG MIME FINDS:

'Everybody Needs A Clown'

By ROBERTA ULRICH

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — "Everybody needs a clown," says pert 27-year-old Linda Bresnan.

So she is "creating my own job" as a free-lance clown.

Her current project is a series of pre-Christmas appearances, under sponsorship of the Portland Park Bureau, at senior citizens centers and nursing homes. The old folks love it.

"Society needs to be turned upside down," Miss Bresnan said. "Society unconsciously recognizes that it needs to be subverted sometimes. People will accept what I do as a clown. My makeup and costume are like the cap and bells of the medieval jester. They give me a license to turn things upside down."

MISS BRESNAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bresnan, Long Beach, Calif., turned to mime after graduating from Reed College here in 1969 with a degree in literature.

She explained, "After five years of college I had had just too many words. I went into nonverbal communication."

She took "a few courses in modern dance" at Reed but, "I always wanted to break out of the bounds of rhythm to the dramatic. Real drama is possible only when you break out of the rhythm or cycle."

So disillusioned with words, she left for Europe. In Paris she studied for two years with Etienne Decroux, the French mime master who taught famed artist Marcel Marceau.

Before returning to the United States, she studied for a time at the Institute of Dramatic Art in Osterund, Sweden, and toured Central Africa on a motorcycle, stopping along the way to earn a living by teaching French.

Last June she returned to the United States for the first time in five years and worked at the Bread and Puppet Theater in Vermont.

"IT WAS THERE she began to clown. "The clown just happened naturally," Miss Bresnan said. "I don't believe you can teach anyone to be a clown. The clown is inside you or it isn't. It's just a matter of finding favorable circumstances and letting it come out."

She said each of her performances as a clown is a little different. "Each is a product of my meeting with people," she explained.

In addition to her appearances as a clown, Miss Bresnan is teaching mime at the Cabell Center for the Performing Arts, which is operated in conjunction with private Catlin Gabel High School, and at the Portland Women's Liberation School.

She has a number of projects planned or proposed, including mime workshops for children in Portland's black area, for the deaf and at Reed, and teaching at a theater workshop for the parks bureau. She hopes eventually to train enough mime performers to start a local mime theater.

Her clown performances have taken her before all sorts of audiences in addition to the senior citizens. One which left a lasting impression on clown as well as audience was a Fairview Hospital at Salem, Oregon's state facility for the retarded.

AFTER HER SHOW one retarded and crippled youngster in a wheelchair reached out a faltering hand to touch her arm and, with great effort, eyes shining, said, "You're pretty."

WOWS HER AUDIENCE — Mime Linda Bresnan proves her thesis that "everybody loves a clown" by breaking up her audience of one in a Portland, Ore., park. (UPI Telephoto)

Center Aids Those Who Need To Take, Need To Give

By BETH ASHLEY

The spirit of Christmas is alive and flourishing in an unimposing yellow building at the edge of central Novato.

Here, in cardboard cartons and on hangers in the back room are the Christmas food, clothing and toys that will be dispensed to a couple of hundred families in North Marin.

Here in the hubbub of phone calls and foot traffic is the feeling of human warmth and giving that for many has been lost in the dross of commercialism at Christmas.

This is the Novato Human Needs Center.

Founded three years ago to give emergency help to people in need, the center at 1523 South Novato Boulevard provides a growing number of human services. Much of the energy of the five-man staff and host of volunteers is focusd this December on a program of Christmas sharing.

THE COMMUNITY has responded with open heart.

Hank Mattimore, a former Catholic priest who is executive director of the center, told how:

Camp Fire Girls, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts have brought toys and contributions of food.

Classes at local schools have undertaken projects of gift making and collection of toys.

The Novato Community Players have put on a benefit production.

Drummer Buddy Miles and his group will give a fund-raising dance New Year's Eve at Novato High.

Churches have contributed food.

Women's clubs and home owners associations have made the center the beneficiary of a number of charity projects.

Individual families have elected to minimize their own Christmas giving in favor of adopting North Marin families in need for the holidays.

Two Sinaloa Junior High School girls fasted for three days and contributed the food they would have eaten.

THESE COMMUNITYWIDE efforts are reflected in the growing number of cartons of gifts that are piled in corners and on shelves throughout the building.

"But we can use more, much more," said Mattimore.

PREPARING FOR CHRISTMAS — Volunteers sort through toys brought to the Novato Human Needs Center as contributions for families who cannot afford to buy any this Christmas. From left are Ellen Springer; Shane Ryker, 10, and Jene Crocker, 15.

"I'm sure most people find it difficult to believe that in the midst of Marin's apparent affluence, there is need.

"But the need is great — and it is growing. We never have enough food to meet the requests. We have at least 50 calls for food a month. On Thanksgiving, we gave turkeys, canned goods, food baskets to 135 families. We will have many more at Christmas.

"We are talking about the newly poor — people who have suddenly lost their jobs, elderly people whose social security checks no longer stretch to meet inflation, women whose husbands have split and left them in charge of a family.

"These people come in here cringing; they have never needed help before and they don't know how to ask.

"We try to make it as comfortable as possible. I tell them, 'This year you'rein trouble. Next year you'll have it together and you can come back and help us.' Many of them do . . .

"I try to show there's not a big dichotomy between us — they need help because they're in trouble. There are some people who need to give. We're just getting people together."

The human needs center was founded in 1972 to take over the emergency functions formerly handled by the Economic Opportunity Council. "It is unique in Marin or in the state as far as I know," said Mattimore. "It is a community service center in a non ghetto area."

It operates on $26,000 from the county of Marin, another $11,000 annually from donations and special grants. Its headquarters are supplied by the City of Novato for a rent of $1 a year.

The services it provides include:

THE FOOD PROGRAM: Twelve churches in North Marin take responsibility each month for donations of food to meet the need. "Most of our clients receive food on a one-time only basis. They are waiting to qualify for welfare or food stamps; they are people with new jobs who won't get their first pay checks for two weeks."

CLOTHING AND furniture program: Persons in need of clothing may come to the center to pick up whatever they need.

"No, we don't ask for proof of need," Mattimore said. "One of the important things about the center is its spirit. We make every effort to be non bureaucratic so people will feel comfortable — partly because . . . this is the way it should be and partly because the newly poor feel extremely embarrassed to be asking for help. We're not about to lay a lot of forms on them.

"I like to think of this place as a general store in an age of supermarkets." One hundred families a month use the clothing service, Mattimore said.

A FREE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE — In a garage across the street from the center, Susan Reid tries to match job openings to people in need of work. "They're not real good jobs," said Mattimore. "They're gardening and housework and that type of thing." A number of people have been placed in Comprehensive Employment Training Act jobs, funded by the federal government, where unemployed persons go to school parttime and work as trainees on jobs parttime.

FREE CLINIC — Every Thursday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 five Novato doctors and eight registered nurses and many nonprofessional volunteers give their time to a free clinic for persons who cannot afford to go to a private physician. An obstetrics and gynecology clinic will be added on Monday nights beginning Jan. 13.

KINSHIP HOTLINE — Diane Bohner and a crew of volunteers man a 24-hour answering service for people in crisis, particularly the young. Volunteers are given 40 hours training in sensitivity and listening skills to cope with the calls of people in trouble. "We get calls from kids with boyfriend-girlfriend problems," said Ms. Bohner. "We get kis saying, 'My dad drinks and I love him. What do I do?' or 'How can I stop my mother and father from fighting?' Or old people who need the sound of another voice. "We listen, and we refer them wherever they need to go."

CHILDREN'S SOCIAL ACITIVITY PROGRAM — Novato high school students act as team leaders for after-school and summer activity programs for youngsters 6 to 10 years old who have no other recreational outlets. "Not only is it tremendously popular with the young kids, it's become a real growth experience for the students," Mattimore said.

COUNSELING PROGRAM — Two advanced counseling students, doing field work under licensed supervisors, operate an ongoing counseling program for people with problems. "These are people who need to talk about their situations but are reluctant to go into a formal counseling program," Mattimore said. On call are counselors from Community Mental Health and the Catholic Social Service; a representative of the Family Service Agency is availabe for consultation.

The services offered at the center seem to multiply faster than Mattimore and his staff can integrate them, "but the temptation is to plunge in. When we see a need, we try to fill it."

Meanwhile, the door of the center continues to open, and the Christmas spirit continues to grow, both for the people who need to give and the ones who need to receive.

Needless Closing Costs Add To Home Prices

Independent Journal

16 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, MONDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1974 EDITORIAL PAGE

The cost of buying a home almost anywhere in the United States has become extremely high. In Marin, it is almost prohibitive for all except the wealthy.

Material and labor costs have largely inflated the price. Here in Marin, the inflation of land prices is a major factor.

On top of all these, however, is one cost that can be shaved despite inflation: the cost of closing the deal.

CHIEF JUSTICE Warren E. Burger, speaking to the American Law Institute in Washington recently, declared:

"The basic system of real estate titles and transfers and the related matters concerning financing and purchase of homes cries out for reexamination and simplification. In a country that transfers not only expensive automobiles but multi-million dollar airplanes with a few relatively simple pieces of paper covering liens and all, I believe that if American lawyers will put their ingenuity and inventiveness to work on this subject they will be able to devise simpler methods than we now have."

A HALF CENTURY ago, it was common practice for a prospective home buyer to have the county recorder check the land title — for a small fee. A certificate from the recorder satisfied most mortgagers.

Transfer of property now requires a title insurance policy. Without it, no lending institution will write a mortgage.

The price of the title policy has nothing to do with the amount of work involved in searching the title. In the vast majority of cases, the work of checking is minimal. It could easily be done, as it was a half century ago, by someone in the recorder's office. Occasionally, of course, there is a complicated title which requires some real digging. But the buyer of a lot or house that has a simple, clear title readily ascertained must pay as much for the insurance as if long checking and some element of risk were involved.

THIS AND ATTENDANT fees run up the "closing costs." These costs add nothing to the value of the home. They involve no materials, and not much labor. Mostly, they involve filling out a few forms — for which the buyer must pay a fee based on the high rates charged by lawyers for their time, although some clerk probably does the work.

A little relief may be in store from a bill passed last week by the House and sent to President Ford for his signature. It requires that buyers be given a list 12 days in advance of settlement of the "closing costs" they will have to pay. And it bars kickbacks in real estate settlements. The latter feature may help some buyers; the former will at least let others know the costs they face.

That is not much help, though. Certainly our lawyers should be able, as Chief Justice Burger suggested, "to devise simpler methods." If they want to, that is.

"Through the hoop, dammit! Through the hoop!"

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

South Offers Large Field Of Presidential Hopefuls

THE SOUTH AND THE 1976 ELECTION: The South has not only returned to the Democratic fold but, more importantly, the Democratic Party is turning to the South.

The southern states are producing a richer mine of recognized presidential candidates than at any time in a hundred years.

Already eight southerners are widely mentioned prospects. Gov. George Wallace is the leading contender with the largest support in the nationwide polls. But he will have plenty of southern competition. It includes Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, State Rep. Julian Bond of Georgia, and Sen.-elect Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

One of these will almost certainly end up either as the Democratic presidential or vice-presidential nominee.

COULD A SOUTHERNER BE ELECTED? Most Democrats feel sure the answer is yes; and some believe that, if the economy does not improve substantially, Governor Wallace could be elected. With one condition: if his nomination didn't split the party down the middle.

GREECE — OUT OF THE SHAMBLES. A strong, united Greek democracy is manifesting itself.

The election gave Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis a solid popular base from which he will not have to cater to the extreme left.

The overwhelming rejection of any return to the monarchy further strengthens the Greek democracy.

Hostility to the United States is vanishing, and co-operation with NATO is increasing.

PRIME-TIME TV KEEPS VIOLENT. The latest "Violence Index" prepared by the University of Pennsylvania shows that, while the nubmer of violent programs on TV is decreasing, the number of violence victims on these programs is increasing. The study finds that regular viewers of these programs are being led to believe that violent crime in the real world is greater than it is — and that's not easy because the rate of violent crime is steadily mounting.

PUBLIC JOBS — GROWING, COSTLY, OFTEN INEFFICIENT. The Census Bureau finds that an average of 1,200 persons a day have been hired for public jobs in the last 10 years.

Government has become the nation's biggest business, employing nearly 13 million and accounting for 22 per cent of the gross national product. State and local governments are adding about 450,000 employees each year, and the spending of local governments increased 80 per cent from 1967 to 1972.

Government grows at every level, but efficiency does not grow — or it declines. This is why in the view of John Haynes, president of the American Management Association, "the American taxpayer feels he is being overcharged."

JOSEPH C. HARSCH:

Ford Has Decided To Reign, Not Rule

Every president of the United States does the job in his own manner. No two have ever done it identically. Their styles have ranged between the extremes of merely presiding over the work of strong subordinates and actually running the machinery of government.

We can begin now to get a fairly clear picture of how Mr. Ford conceives and operates the presidency. In one small and unimportant respect, his method resembles that of Mr. Nixon, but in major matters it is almost an exact opposite. They are alike in spending a lot of time out of Washington, but the nature of the absences and the use made of them are poles apart.

MR. NIXON HAD three alternate seats of government: Camp David, Key Biscayne, and San Clemente. He took the machinery of command with him whenever he went to any of these three other "White Houses." But he never for an instant ceased to run every detail of government operation.

President Ford is out of Washington almost as much of the time as was Mr. Nixon, but it is not to run an alternate White House for any length of time. He makes quick trips. Almost any day he is off somewhere to attend an anniversary, make a speech, wave at poeple.

Mostly his trips are nonpolitical. There is nothing devious or contrived about them, or him. They express his life-style. He likes everyone. Everyone likes him. He is friendly, gregarious. He is turning into an excellent ceremonial president of all the people. He is reigning — in a most engaging manner. He is not ruling.

THIS IS NOT BAD. It is not unprecedented. A lot can be said for having a president who presides, but does not rule. The United States has had an overdose of rulers for quite a while. Roosevelt, Kennedy, Johnson, and Nixon were all rulers. Having had so many strong rulers of recent years, Americans can find relief in a presiding president who enjoys it so much.

But who does make policy and then pushes the machinery of government into execution of policy? There are important decisions to be made these days. The biggest immediate problem for Washington is fixing the right priorities between anti-inflation and anti-depression measures. Mr. Ford is not making those decisions.

In foreign affairs there is no problem. Dr. Kissinger enjoys the confidence of the bulk of Congress and of public opinion. There are exceptions. But by and large almost everyone approves of his broad policies and still thinks his methods of approaching those policies are working reasonably well. He has lost his aura of indispensability, but he is still generally accepted as the best secretary of state in sight.

In domestic affairs someone is wanted to make the hard decisions. President Ford, clearly, does not intend to do it himself. He has put off the important domestic decisions and the reason now becomes obvious. Those will be handed over to Vice President Nelson Rockefeller.

SO WHAT LIES AHEAD for the United States is a period in which we will have a presiding but not a ruling president who will be served by two prime ministers, one for foreign policy and the other for domestic policy.

It need not be a poor system. It could work extremely well. And, it is what Americans should have been expecting because this is precisely the way Mr. Ford did his last previous job as minority leader of the House of Representatives.

He was the most popular man in the House. But the only act of policy initiative anyone remembers coming from him was the proposal to impeach Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court. And that never got off the ground.

Mr. Ford is not either a policymaker or a hard decisionmaker. He is like a constitutional monarch who acts on advice of his ministers. What matters in this system is the quality and competence of the ministers.

In due time we will find out about the ministers.

Girls' Water Polo Deserves More Support

Almost all of the time I enjoy your paper but I do have a complaint that has been bothering me for some time and that is the very little space your sports department devotes to womens' sports, particularly high school girls.

Now you have a marvelous opportunity to really latch onto something brand new in womens' sports and that is girls' water polo. It is so new that the Marin County Athletic League does not even support it (but the Amateur Athletic Union does). There are two girls' teams in Marin high schools; one at Tam and one at Redwood. Tam is coached by Eric Phillips and Redwood by Dennis Good. Neither of these coaches are being paid for this job and that's how much they believe in it! Terra Linda and San Rafael were also interested but could not find any volunteer coaches. In fact, we even have college boys as volunteer referees . . .

It seems to me that your newspaper and the high schools as well as the M.C.A.L. are male oriented. You do not give the girls the publicity they deserve and need, the high school budgets and facilities are not equal for girls as for boys and the M.C.A.L. must be all male chauvinists!

A Smile Worth While Is Long Remembered

Was it for Christmas 1974?

While my daughter and I were in the Coffee Etc. house in the Mall at Northgate on a Saturday p.m. in November for a cup of coffee, I received a smile, a real genuine radiant smile from a 4-year-old girl with her mother. They were both beautiful. That smile said, "I know you; don't you know me?" It was genuine because she was only about 4 years old. She didn't call my name, but when they left she said a loud, "Goodbye."

Yes — a smile worth while . . .

Fairfax Police Win Praise For Efficiency

We wish to commend and thank Chief of Police Charles Grasso and his department for the excellent police work in apprehending the young people responsible for vandalism to our greenhouse.

We especially want to commend Officer Charles O'Toole for the splendid manner in which he handled the young people involved and the courtesy shown to all the parents and to us. They have all made restitution and we feel that, due to the efforts and understanding of Officer O'Toole together with the cooperation of the parents, these young people have learned a lesson they will not soon forget.

It is good to know that our city has such efficient officers.

Time Has Arrived For Housing Districts

With the recent decisive action by the Marin County Board of Supervisors, the inevitable moment has arrived for consideration of housing districts in the county and municipalities.

The initial plan was presented to our council April 15, 1973. It was believed by the Fairfax Housing Element Committee to be fair, equitable, and representative of all concerned.

It is imperative, with the ever-increasing cost of living and unemployment, that priority be given for additional tax relief for the elderly home owners; a bonus system for immediate construction of low-medium income units and a subsidized program on rent and taxes for those people on limited income.

Is Child's Life Worth $15,264 — Or $7,623?

I would like to comment on Mrs. James Clark's letter (Dec. 16). She seems to feel it is preferable that an unborn child's life be ended by abortion (cost $180) than that it cost the government $15,264 to provide support (at $212 per month) until age 6. This is to say a child's life is not worth $15,264. What makes her so sure that the 278,000 unborn children whose lives were ended by abortion would have remained on welfare that long? Some of them might be placed for adoption, some of their mothers become self-supporting or married in a few months or a year or two. Would their lives be worth, say $7,623 (three years of welfare)?

What makes her think that children of parents on welfare will "suffer from years of parental neglect and end up in jail"? It is permissiveness, not low income, that breeds juvenile delinquents. How is it that so many inmates of Juvenile Hall come from homes of at least moderate affluence? She brings up the case of the battered child, which we all deplore. I have read reports from various authorities who all state the vast majority of battered children were "wanted." . . .

There is no such thing as an "unwanted child" — only mothers who don't want to be pregnant. There are so many people wanting to adopt children but there are not babies available for them.

. . . I wonder if Mrs. Clark is absolutely positive that her own mother received the news that she was pregnant with unbridled joy. Is Mrs. Clark glad her mother persevered with her pregnancy and gave her life?

SACRAMENTO SCENE

State Senate No Longer A Club Of Comrades

By EARL G. WATERS

The low estate to which comradery has sunk in the California Senate could not have been more graphically demonstrated than in its recently handling of the Sen. Craig Biddle confirmation.

Biddle served as a deputy district attorney in Riverside prior to his election to the Assembly in 1964. In a closely contested special election for a successor to Sen. Gordon Cologne, appointed to the appellate court by Governor Reagan in 1972, Biddle, a Republican, narrowly defeated Democrat Robert Presley, Riverside's undersheriff. Presley came back this year to unseat Biddle.

IN AN EFFORT to continue Biddle in state government, Governor Reagan named him to a four-year term on the Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board. The post requires confirmation by the Senate.

Normally, because Reagan's term ends in January, he could not have appointed Biddle for the reason he was elected for a term also ending in January. The Constitution bars the naming of a legislator to a non-elective state office during the term for which he was elected. But, in the changeover to two-year sessions commencing in December, a provision was made that legislative terms now end on Dec. 1. This change opened the door for governors to make "death bed" appointments of lawmakers to state posts, as Reagan attempted in Biddle's case.

Of an unusually serious nature, Biddle was not an outgoing, hail fellow-well met type, but his conduct as a legislator was above reproach. In other days his confirmation would have been a cake walk. Senators stuck together like chewing gum to a shoe. If you kicked one in the shins they all wore bandages. It didn't matter whether one be a Democrat or Republican, he was a senator first, last and always. More than one lobbyist found out to his everlasting sorrow that the fastest way to lose his job was to become persona non grata to a senator. He was thereafter ostracized by all the rest.

BUT WHEN THE SENATE Rules Committee met this month to consider the Biddle appointment, not one of the five members would make a motion for or against and the committee adjourned with no action. That was a rejection.

So it is obvious that the old days when the Senate operated as the state's most exclusive club have gone by the boards. The strong partisan sentiments which have developed in the upper house have not only created animosities between the majority and minority party members, but within each group bitterness among themselves, based largely upon feelings that one is too liberal or too conservative.

To their credit, Democratic Rules Committee members Joseph Kennick and James Mills sought to salvage something for Biddle by suggesting Reagan appoint him to the Youth Authority, a job for which Biddle is eminently qualified. But Gov.-elect Jerry Brown promptly advised he would withdraw the nomination as soon as he took office.

"The Democrats are going to have peace and unity this time even if they have to bash some heads in."

The Public Relations People Do Away With Our Traditions

(From Harry Reasoner on ABC News)

There is a process going on in America which we have noted before in this space. It is a sort of blanding of our culture, a conversion of tradition to public relations. I noted it first when they took Armistice Day, a poignant and valid reminder of our first great international adventure, and renamed it Veterans' Day. The process is self-feeding; having renamed the day, they then moved it to make it a part of a three-day week end for the airlines and motels. I suggested at the time that, logically, Feb. 12 would become Presidential Birthday Day, Oct. 12 would be Famous Discoverers' Day, and the first Monday in September would be Labor, Management, and Consumers Day.

Well, it's moving along. The latest tendency to bland things up is the quiet decision by American business to abandon Merry Christmas. United Press International notes that on Christmas — you should excuse the expression — cards and on their postage-meter messages, business firms are now saying something zingy like "Season's Greetings." Pitney Bowes, the postage-meter people, say that of 600,000 firms ordering holiday messages only 2 per cent wanted to say Merry Christmas. Phooey. I don't think most Christians want to enforce the merriness of their holy day on non-Christians, but I don't think most non-Christians begrudge the Christians their Christmas, either. Why not let the message stand, or any other specialized message that means a lot to a lot of people?

Well, the process is probably irreversible. If this year the P-R types succeed in changing the greeting, changing the name of the day is probably next. We could call it Popular Religious Leaders Natal Day, and move it to the third Monday in January for a longer shopping season.

WILL ROGERS SAYS . . .

"There must be an awful lot of factories, and firms, and individuals that have always shown some kind of appreciation to their folks at Christmas time, who perhaps this year on account of conditions are not able to do all they would like to do, and are at a loss just what to do.

"Wouldn't this be more welcome than a gift? Send each one a note and sell 'em that they are not going to be fired, that their position is secure.

"I believe that will be a mighty acceptable Xmas present to everybody that is on salary. It will relieve their anxiety, and let them go out and do some shopping on their own, and thereby help everybody.

"We are bad off, but the world ain't coming to an end yet." — Dec. 16, 1930.

Latest Congress Reforms Close It With Laughter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For better or worse or somewhere in between, the congressional reform movement is again showing signs of life.

The recent shake-up of the House Ways and Means Committee may be only the tip of the ice cube.

When the new Congress, teeming with freshmen House members, assembles next year, we likely will see many more attacks on the seniority system and other time-encrusted legislative practices.

One proposed reform that may finally receive some consideration has to do with procedural formalities.

Both House and Senate open each session with a prayer delivered by their respective chaplains. There is, however, no closing ritual.

Someone simply moves that the House or Senate adjourn, and the whole thing just sort of collapses of its own weight.

Many authorities feel the parliamentary process would be well served by adoption of a more ceremonious ending.

A closing prayer perhaps? Lawgivers joining hands and singing "Till We Meet Again?"

Either would be suitable, but I feel it would be more fitting to conclude the day's labors along the lines suggested by George Q. Lewis, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of the Art of Joke Telling.

Lewis advocates ending each congressional session with a good, old-fashioned knee-slapper.

"Always leave 'em laughing," he admonishes. "Although jokes can't solve problems, they help alleviate worries and allay anxieties by giving perspective."

Lewis has even gone so far as to compile a sample of "gags to close Congress with."

—"Life is what you make it, until somebody comes along and makes it worse., — "There's one good thing about the future —it never lasts."

Gags like that would close nearly anything.

To deliver the daily zingers, each legislative body would hire a quipster who would stimulate their risibilities after the chaplain ministered to their spiritual needs.

The concept of congressional jesters is by no means original with Lewis. But up to now they have always been elected.

Additionally, there is precedent. President Ford retained the services of a gag writer as soon as he moved into the White House.

Most important, the congressional comedian would complement the chaplain's work beautifully — a prayer for what Congress is about to do: a laugh about what actually happened.

China Reaps Biggest Grain Harvest Ever

HONG KONG (UPI) — China reaped its biggest grain harvest in history this year, Peking Radio reported today.

The report gave no production figures but said "output shows a fairly big increase over 1973."

The 1973 harvest, also a record, exceeded 250 million tons, Chinese agricultural officials told UPI late last year.

Some Japanese economists said they were told a few months ago that the 1973 harvest was about 257 million tons.

Analysts specializing in Chinese economic affairs said the 1974 harvest probably would go over the 260 million ton mark. A few predicted a yield as high as 270 million tons.

Peking Radio said that besides grain, "harvests of cotton, oil, hemp, sugar and other industrial crops are excellent" as the crucial fourth year of the nation's current five-year plan drew to a close.

The broadcast also reported "fresh successes" in other agricultural sectors such as forestry, livestock production and fisheries.

"Good crops were reaped in nearly all parts of the country," the report said. "Particularly noteworthy are the speedy rises in grain production in traditionally disaster-ridden, low-yield areas with poor natural conditions."

It said the big harvest was achieved despite "fairly serious" natural disasters, such as floods, drought, windstorms, hail, frost and insects.

China analysts said much of the credit for overcoming these problems must be attributed to off season preparations, particularly in the field of water conservation projects.

Peking Radio said tens of millions of peasants moved more than 6 billion cubic meters of earth and stone while working on irrigation and other land improvement projects.

"More than 3.3 million hectares (7.2 million acres) of irrigated fields were added or improved and 1.6 million hectares (3.52 million acres) of land were protected against waterlogging," the radio report said.

Another factor in the rise in grain production was an increase in state capital investment in agriculture, Peking Radio said. But it provided no investment figures.

Reds Repeat Objection To U.S. Trade Measure

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has repeated its objections to the U.S. trade bill tying continued trade concessions to freer emigration for Soviet Jews and others.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda said yesterday the Soviet Union rejects any attempt at interference in its internal affairs.

The official government news agency Tass statement denied last Wednesday the Soviet Union had given any specific assurances, in return for U.S. trade concessions, on easing conditions for Jews and others wishing to leave the country.

The U.S. Congress passed the bill last Thursday.

Reports from Washington have said the Kremlin, while publicly denying any deal linking trade to emigration, has given private assurances that there will be an end to harassment of those seeking to emigrate.

Pravda said, "It must be stressed that the Soviet-U.S. trade agreement of 1972 clearly indicates that trade and economic relations between the two countries must be built on the basis of full equality of the sides and noninterference in the internal affairs of each other.

"Now the advocates of tension are trying to undermine the very foundation of the Soviet-U.S. agreement.

"The leading circles of the Soviet Union, as the Tass statement published Dec. 19 says, categorically reject as unacceptable all attempts from whatever source they may come at interference in the affairs that are completely within the internal competence of the Soviet state and do not concern anyone else.

"The justice of this stand is met with understanding among reasonable American figures."

The U.S. bill directs the administration to monitor emigration of Jews and other minorities from the Soviet Union and to rescind most-favored-nation trade status within 18 months after a determination the Soviets are harassing would-be emigres.

Heart Surgery Repeat Planned

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Dr. Christiaan Barnard's surgical team is ready to give another patient a second heart in a repeat of its pioneering operation last month and is waiting for a suitable donor.

A spokesman at Cape Town's Groote Schur hospital said yesterday that a middle-aged person whom it did not identify is awaiting a transplant as soon as a donor is received.

The surgeons are prepared to operate on Christmas Day if necessary. The doctors made medical history Nov. 25 when they gave a 58-year-old engineer, Ivor Taylor, a second heart to beat alongside his own.

Temblor Rocks Northern Chile

ARICA, Chile (UPI) — There was alarm but no damage or injuries when a medium-size earthquake rocked the extreme northern part of Chile and southern Peru.

Police said the quake, which struck at 2 p.m. EST yesterday and measured five on the 12-point international earthquake scale, was felt in the northern Chilean cities of Arica, Antofagasta and Iquique and in Tacna across the border in Peru.

Arica is 1,000 miles north of Santiago.

MUSIC REVIEW

Marin Winter Concert: Fabulous

By BLAKE A. SAMSON

Conductor John H. Myers and the College of Marin Community Orchestra hit a fabulous peak in their 1974 Winter Concert with the delicate "Fantasia para Un Gentilhombre" by Joaquin Rodrigo and gave a lilting lift to Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 5.

The Saturday evening concert at the Fine Arts Theater also opened with the bold overture to Franz von Suppre's "Light Cavalry" and closed with the turbulent "Colas Breugnon Suite" by Dimitri Kabalevsky.

The mix of flute, oboe, bassoon and guitar in the "Fantasia" makes for as fragrant a piece of music as an Andalusian meadow. The woodwind song, the darker shades of viola and cello, the striking or curving violins and the plucked ripeness of the guitar lacked an overall flow, but each unit was an opened flower.

Guitar soloist John Magee, a second year music student who started guitar only three years ago, was moving throughout. Submerging then surfacing feeling in the Villano y Ricercare, he was still nowhere as frail, as touching, as tender and transparent as in the Espanoleta.

The pulling of melody inward, with mournful echos from oboeist Stephen Herrick, was romantic and misty, while the plucked violins and orchestra accompaniment, set against a sad staccato guitar rhythm, never losing its Spanish control and dignity.

The more difficult Danza de las Hachas opens with a windy flute and trumpet whisper, not always achieved, but the bassoon solo from James Drake was affective in its fading delicacy.

The Canario, with its sharply distinctive gait, started poorly then recovered. It calls for an exactness of attack that the flutes in particular and the woodwinds in general did have, but the strings lacked.

It is hard to keep the lightly soured accents — used for flavoring — in the Canario under control. These unusual twists in tonality became here a bit too turned, yet Jack Skelton's trumpet solo was strong.

To hear this on a less steely guitar would be curious. George Sakellariou's guitar (in the powerful San Francisco Ballet's "Don Juan" set to this music) is warmer. This would have made Magee's tones even lighter, more glowing, although the embers that were, were fire enough. The applause left no doubt which piece stirred the full house the most.

In the peppery kabalevsky, the orchestra speaks not in full sentences but in short, intertwined expletives. What shifts there are, from pert, brassy catcalls to sweeping string washes — all on a mammoth canvas. Obviously enjoying the bold statement, the players were most accurate and momentous.

The pace was much tighter in the Fete Populare, which tended to throw some of the von Suppe and Mozart into question, but showed what a spirited level of pyrotechnics the players could be inspired to.

The Fleau Publique is richly iced with shining dissonances and Skelton's trumpet had a forewarning premonition that would have chilled the most callous.

Superbly opened by Drake's bassoon, the Insurrection movement (the call to march) built early and came on strong, responding to the command and sweep of conductor Myers' baton.

Rhonda Bingham, solo violinist in the Mozart, strove for the fullest warmth she could get. The sad, sensitive introspection Miss Bingham gave the Adagio further emphasized her fluency and the bridge from her solo line into the violin sections were most effective.

In the staccato allegro (after the minuetto) a fast dialogue chattered back and forth. She took special delight in the sharp shift of tempo, an approach in style not matched entirely by Myers and the full orchestra.

At times we could hear her too consciously try for an affect, but the effects attempted were musically perceptive and difficult especially in those marvelously lifting curls that Mozart writes into his minuettos.

Von Suppe's "light Cavalry" overture was conducted with majestical fullness, matched by strong punctuations from full orchestra and flawless clarinet highlights from Christopher Faville.

Discounting momentary misses, the trumpets in particular in the gallop and the brass in general were good and the timpani and percussion with snaredrum tips gave a rolling peak to the building cresendo. It was robust and strongly delivered.

DANCE REVIEW

Marin Civic Ballet 'Nutcracker' Glitters Visually And Musically

The very name "The Nutcracker" evokes the magic of Christmas and the ballet has become a Marin Civic Ballet Christmas tradition. What is it that kept Saturday's full matinee audience at the Marin Veterans Memorial clamoring for more again this season?

There was, first, the incredible Tchaikovsky music and no one in the Bay Area conducts the visually-suggestive, rambunctious score better than Hugo Rinaldi.

Leading the combined Marin Youth Orchestra and the Marin Symphony Association's Orchestra Piccola, Rinaldi maneuvered style so distinctively that the many and varied Old World dance forms stood clear as crystal. There was the shine of the first string accompaniment, the bounce the woodwinds gave to the galop, the stately polonaise, the muted refinement of the first act waltz and the lift of the "snowflake" variation.

With the Grossvater dance, divertisements in the highest tradition of classical ballet, the fragile Sugar Plum celeste solo and coda (played by Bridget Conrad) and the exciting Cavalier tarantella, "The Nutcracker" is Tchaikovsky at his fullest and Rinaldi illuminated it stunningly. Bravo, maestro!

Leona Norman, the Civic Ballet's directress has choreographed an intimate show for a cast of 50, 90 per cent in their teens or younger. It is brought to a precise execution.

It is devilishly difficult to choreograph for children and Miss Norman's lively, folksy dances set in Act I work far better than the children's choreography in the San Francisco Ballet's "Nutcracker." Witness the simple but effective kicks for the soldiers that won a deserved round of applause.

Her open scene is also filled with nice, unusual touches, the mischief-makers all in black tights, the sleepy kids over their parent's shoulders and the mice stealing a present now and then.

This sets a reason for the battle between the Mouse King and the Prince, a reason that any child can understand, and is not done in either the San Francisco or Oakland Nutcrackers.

I do think, however, that the nephew should not be eliminated. It is he who is transformed by Clara's imagination into the heroic Price and the Cavalier and he is a touching, integral part of the story.

Miss Norman is fortunate to have two strong child actors Logan Frederick as Clara and Bob Murphy as the Prince, as well as a strong corps de ballet.

The two youngsters had a stage presence that was graceful and Murphy's absolutely assured gestures were as controlled as a true prince's.

Winter is most evocatively suggested in the Snow Scene, as Clara and the Prince travel to the Land of the Enchanted Sugar Plum Fairy under Robert Finley's grayblue lighting and Charles Hoeppner's show-ladden pines.

Here the corps de ballet, all en pointe, intricately interlaced pattern on pattern. With their full-length tutus, the very pleasant choreography and the delicate vocal accompaniment from the San Raphael High School a capella Choir, this became a scene of true classical refinement.

Act I closes with a crescendo and a sharply silouetted lift that exampled the fine pas-de-deux fancing from Carolen Weisenburg and Charles Perrier.

The Ringmaster, Ponies and Clowns has prance, dance and dash as did the earlier Columbines, Harlequin, Mice and Soldiers.

The Spanish divertissement (Laurie Davis, Kathy Gould, Anne Little and Robbin Sicard) was quickly executed, but the choreography faltered in the Arabian Dance.

Surely Cindy Shatz could have been given more evocative moves to match this perfume-filled music.

The translation of ballet vocabulary into Chinese mannerisms was fine (Mindy Jones and Nell Stewart) and the Russian kickdance (Eric Gallo-Walker and John Tucker) contributed a welcome pizzaz. The Ribbon Candy dancers (Lucette Laterndahl and Alison Leidel) matched the sprite flutes just as the harpist (Efrat Lavry) captured the clarity of execution that Kathi McCormick showed in the grand pas de deux.

Miss McCormick's precise construction of each move and position, partnered aptly by the attentive Richard Cook, was markedly plain to see and made up for a slight lack in flow.

Cook's off-the-ground arabesques came straight down onto his knees and were smashing to watch.

As the complete opposite to Cook's bravura there was the fleecelike poetry of Michelle Savage's Waltz of the Flower. Danced with a timidity, a fragility of gesture and fluency of movement, Miss Savage gave the adagio a lithe delicacy, matched by the cotton candy rhapsody from the corps deballet. No wonder the Civic Ballet's "Nutcracker" has become an annual tradition! B.A.S.

Prayer By Telephone Service Is Booming

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Twice as many people are telephoning for a prayer these days and Dale Radke thinks it's a sign of the times.

Radke is executive secretary of the Greater Milwaukee Federation of Lutheran Churches-Missouri Synod. He said calls to the federation's "Dial-A-Prayer" service have more than doubled in a year.

The most dramatic increase came in August, right around the time of President Nixon's resignation.

"On Aug. 7 and 8, when we didn't know whether we were going to have any government at all, the calling volume jumped to 300 a day," Radke said.

"It has stayed so high since then that we've had to add another recorded answering service."

Radke, a layman, said it appears people are "looking for something to lift their spirits."

"When people are in a crisis situation, when you have this inflation thing, the joblessness, and everything looks bad, people tend to get down on their knees more often," he said.

He said that a year ago in August the total calls logged were 2,694. In August this year the total was 6,458. During November, he said, there were 6,687 calls, compared with 2,537 the previous November.

He said the actual totals may have been higher, but the federation moved in April and had to get a new telephone number.

The new number, however, is one easily remembered. It's GOD-LOVE.

When it became necessary to add the second phone, Radke was told there was no money for it in the budget. So he made an appeal on the recording and raised the money in less than six weeks.

One 15-year-old sent $100 — part of the money he had earned on a summer job, Radke said.

"God's been good to me," the boy wrote. "And I made good money so I want to share my earnings with the Lors."

12-Year-Old Gives Ford Advice On Running U.S.

OAKLAND (UPI) — Twelve-year-old Kathy Green had some advice for President Ford, so she sent him a letter.

The President wrote back to the seventh-grader last week and said, "With your spirit and energy the future is bright indeed."

Kathy told Ford that if she were President, she would "put food prices down...please all bus drivers...give everyone a fair chance...build new houses in the ghetto and put the rent down a little...follow the rules and pay taxes...never go back on my word...never tell lies."

"I wish I were President. I'd make homes for the elderly...Would you please write me back and tell me how you like my letter?"

In a note bearing his signature, the President responded:

"I am especially encouraged to know that you care enough to take time to write and share your feelings with me. "You are never too young to take part in working for a better America.

"I have great faith in our nation's young people and I hope you never lose the willingness to act when you believe you can help."

Siberian Gas Deal Opposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, says the United States should not risk an estimated $7 billion to finance exploration for natural gas in Siberia.

Church's subcommittee on multinational corporations said in a report Saturday that development of the projects would make U.S. coastal areas dependent on the Soviet Union for up to 15 per cent of their natural gas supply by 1982.

"At a time when the United States is struggling to reduce its dangerous dependence on Middle Eastern oil, the projects would create a new and equally risky dependence on the Soviet Union," Church said.

Tam Trustees Slated To Approve Contract

The Tamalpais High School District board will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the district office to award a bid for drainage work at Redwood High School, with low bidder Valentine Corp. of San Rafael ($39,879) recommended for the award.

This will be followed by a closed session for the board's semiannual evaluation of Supt. Robert D. Torrey, whose one-year contract expires next Monday.

Jury Awards Coed $350,000

MIAMI (UPI) — A British college coed beaten nearly to death in a bus terminal restroom in August, 1973, has been awarded $350,000 from Greyhound Bus Co. by a Circuit Court jury.

Attorneys for 22-year-old Helen Evans had asked for a settlement of from $3.3 million to $5.1 million, charging she was disfigured by the beating and suffered brain damage.

The British girl, who was attacked on a visit to the United States with her fiance, testified at the trial she was unable to recall details of the beating which nearly killed her.

Citizen's Band Radio Spreads Yule Spirit

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Mike Shaffer manned his citizen band radio all night yesterday fulfilling "the right kind of Christmas spirit" — collecting — money, clothing and food for a family of seven whose home and belongings were destroyed in a weekend fire.

He and other radio operators even found a temporary home for the family.

"Super," whose "real handle" is Mike Shaffer, was one of about 3,000 citizen band operators who helped broadcast and organize the relief project for the Jack Blacksmith family.

Blacksmith, his wife and their five children escaped in only their underwear early Saturday when the blaze ripped through their new home in Sheldahl, just north of here.

Shaffer, who began a 24-hour donation marathon yesterday morning at a fuel truckstop here, said by early today truckers, operators and private citizens had delivered some $500 and 30 boxes of food, clothing, toys and Christmas presents. He said one Wisconsin trucker who heard the call on his CB radio stopped on his way through Des Moines to buy and deliver the Blacksmiths a Christmas tree and $10.

"That's the right kind of Christmas spirit," said Shaffer. "I alerted operators in a three-state area," and today a bunch of us are going up north to pick up more stuff folks have donated."

Blacksmith, 33, "a truck driver who just makes ends meet," said his family has been offered a house in Sheldahl, furniture and enough presents "to give the kids a Christmas" as the result of Shaffer's organization.

KEY TO PERSONALITY

Face Gives You Away

By LEW CODDINGTON

What are you really like? According to Robert L. Whiteside, it's as plain as the nose on your face.

Whiteside is a student of what he calls "personology," a way of figuring out someone's personality from his physical appearance.

The 67-year-old Larkspur resident has expanded his insights into four books, countless television appearances and the entire curriculum for his Burlingame-based Interstate College of Personology.

When meeting someone, Whiteside will look past the firm handshake, the winning smile or the appealing haircut and concentrate on things which appear unimportant, but which, he says, provide valuable clues to the personality.

"If someone has deep-set eyes, it indicates he's serious-minded," Whiteside explained. "If they have a long, thin face, like a collie dog, it indicates modesty."

Some of the indicators are so obvious, according to Whiteside, that they have crept into our language as truisims. "When you say somebody is tight-lipped, high brown or thin-skinned, everybody knows what kind of personality you're talking about."

In that way, the "bulldog chin" of former President Nixon indicated the fighting bent of his character, Whiteside said.

Other indicators are not so obvious, but are no less valid, Whiteside said. Nixon's "scoopity nose" indicated he was "not really the administrator" and "had no feel for money," he said.

Much of Whiteside's knowledge came from research he did, first at San Quentin Prison, then for the University of California at Berkeley, back in the 1940s, after he quit a newspaper reporting job in Tulare.

He started the College of Personology in 1957. It is now incorporated in 20 states, and has granted certificates to more than 1,000 persons who have completed its courses.

Many have used personology successfully in their businesses. Whiteside specializes in training life insurance salesman, and says they have increased their proficiency after study. He also cites an East Bay lawyer, who has not lost a case since his wife, trained in personology, began helping him with jury selection.

Whiteside crisscrosses the country espousing his cause, appearing on numerous television shows, giving newspaper inverviews, and giving lectures to various groups.

The latest of his four books, called "Face Language," is now in its third printing and "selling very well." The cover, showing a woman's face and a series of unanswered questions about her personality, is reminiscent of the recent best-seller, "Body Language," which also spoke of figuring a person's personality from appearnce.

"The book is popular because everybody likes to do face language," Whiteside said. "Everybody feels you can know more about someone if you look at them carefully.

"Sometimes, though, people judge by things that aren't fundamental, like a person's skin color. There is no trait linked to pigmentation."

No personality can be figured out excactly or totally, Whiteside said, but personology "gives you a handle." He says he never has been wrong in pegging an individual because "you have multiple correlation working for you — several factors will point to the same thing."

Why does it work?

"There is a natural connection between structure and function," Whiteside says. "There is a part of the person that is not outwardly determined. There's something inside, an organism in there, that gives identity, that makes each person an individual."

'Very Quiet' Weekend In San Quentin

San Quentin prison was "very quiet" over the weekend as most of the prison's 2,843 inmates remained locked in cells to prevent recurrance of the violence which claimed two lives last week.

Prison officials will meet today to reconsider the lockdown, "but I doubt very seriously if the whole prison will be unlocked today or tomorrow," said William D. Nyberg, information officer.

"We'll look at parts of it today, primarily the west (honor) block," Nyberg said.

He said officials have detained five suspects in the violence, which left Arthur Harris, 26, and Truman O. Nichols, 29, dead, and four other injured.

Injured men Gary Davis, 25, and David Aguirre, 26, have improved but remain in critical condition at the prison hospital, Nyberg said. Perry Taylor, 28, also remains at the hospital but James Henning, 34, has been released, he added.

Head-On Crash Kills One; Four In Hospital

I-J Special Report

SEBASTOPOL — Four Rohnert Park residents remained hospitalized here today following a head-on crash Friday which killed a Sebastopol man.

Clarence I. Edwards, 54, was dead on arrival at Sebastopol's Palm Drive Hospital, where he was taken after his car crashed into one driven by Elaine R. Loftin, 30, of 123 Pamplona Court, Rohnert Park.

The California Highway Patrol said the accident happened at about 8 p.m. on the Gravenstein Highway near Todd Road. Edwards had apparently been driving on the wrong side of the road, the highway patrol said.

Mrs. Loftin was listed in satisfactory condition today as were two of her four passengers, Deanna Stewart, 9, and Rachelle Diel, 8. Ricky Phillips, 3, was reported in fair condition and another passenger, Mark Stewart, 12, was released after treatment. All four children live at the Loftin home, patrol officers said.

Lady Bird Gets A Birthday Call From Ford

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — Lady Bird Johnson, widow of President Lyndon Johnson, got a phone call at her Johnson City, Tex., ranch yesterday afternoon.

It was from President Ford, and he wished her a happy 62nd birthday.

The White House said Ford made the eight-minute call from his Vail residence shortly after returning from skiing. He spoke to Mrs. Johnson first and then gave the phone to Mrs. Ford, who gave Mrs. Johnson her best wishes.

EYES HAVE IT — Robert L. Whiteside of Larkspur, who believes personalities can be figured out from physical appearance, points out one example on a placard he uses when he appears on television. The "laugh lines" around this man's eyes, Whiteside says, indicate he is cheerful and can be kidded. (Photo by Jim Kean)

Ernie Ford A Big Hit In Russia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tennessee Ernie Ford was belting out "Sixteen Tons" for the folks in Leningrad, Moscow and other Soviet cities.

The famed singer and a 31-member group from Opryland near Nashville toured the Soviet Union from Sept. 11 to Oct. 13, playing to full houses as part of the State Department's offering of American culture under an exchange program.

A Russian and British crew filmed the tour for Russian and American television, and a few guests were invited recently to a private screening at the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

Afterwards, Soviet Embassy Information Officer Anatoly Mkrtchyan said country music "is the best thing you have in America."

Lower Limit Urged On Nuclear Weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., says the United States should try to negotiate lower limits on nuclear arms than contained in the recent Vladivostok agreement.

Sparkman, who succeeds Sen. J. William Fulbright as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he thought the Vladivostok pact concluded by President Ford was a good agreement but "we had rather those ceilings were much lower."

ALMANAC

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Today is Monday, Dec. 23, the 357th day of 1974 with eight to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

Mormon religious founder Joseph Smith was born Dec. 23, 1805.

On this day in history:

In 1783, General George Washington resigned his commission with the U.S. Army and retired to Mount Vernon, Va.

In 1928, the National Broadcasting Company established a permanent coast-to-coast hookup.

In 1948, ex-Premier Tojo of Japan and six other Japanese war leaders were hanged in Tokyo by the Allied War Crimes Commission.

In 1972, former Presidemtn Harry Truman was placed on the critical list in a Kansas City, Mo., hospital, where he died three days later.

A thought for the day: American novelist Thomas Wolfe said, "Most of the time we think we're sick, it's all in the mind."

WINNING BRIDGE

A Classical Education Can Help Your Bridge Dialogue

One of the benefits of a classical education is that you can find the right thing to say at the bridge table. This became clear when today's hand was played by Abram Chasins, pianist, composer and educator.

ACE OF SPADES

Chasins won the opening lead with the ace of spades and wished for a fleeting moment that he hadn't bid so much. Then he squared his shoulders and set to work.

He led a spade to dummy's king and returned a spade from dummy, ruffing with the nine of hearts.

West pounced on this with the ten of hearts. "Never look a gift horse in the mouth," he chortled.

STILL WAITING

West then returned a trump and waited for a trick with one of his kings. He is still waiting.

Chasins won the trump return in his hand and led the four of trumps to dummy's seven — which was an entry to dummy, thanks to West's overruff. Declarer then ran dummy's good spades, discarding a small diamond and a small club.

"Beware the Greeks, even bearing gifts," Chasins quoted.

Apparently, the first thing to know about a gift is whether it's a horse or a Greek. The things you have to know to play bridge well!

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - K 8 7 6 5 2
♥ - 7 3
♦ - 10 9 5
♣ - J 8.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two spades.

Don't leap to four spades despite the length and strength in partner's suit. The jump to four should show fair strength, even though most of it is distributional rather than in high cards.

Two Still Missing After Avalanche

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — Two men were still missing today in an avalanche that buried part of the town of Neskaupstadur on Iceland's east coast, killing 10 people.

One of the missing men was running a bulldozer and the other driving a bus when the 800-yard avalanche roared down a mountain range and hit the town of 1,500 inhabitants Friday night.

Woman Killed In Shoot-Out Between Police

NEW YORK (UPI) — A woman was killed during a shootout yesterday between an off-duty cop and a corrections officer who mistakenly believed the woman was being robbed, police said.

Police said Housing Authority Officer James Gibson, 31, was arresting Maria Pellot, 24, on a street in Brooklyn when Correction Officer Robert Johnson, 26, passed by.

Thinking Miss Pellot was being robbed, Johnson ordered Gibson to drop his gun. Gibson dove for cover.

At that point a shot rang out and both officers started firing. Nine shots were fired before a third cop convinced the two men to give him their weapons.

When the shooting was over, the woman lay fatally wounded in the street.

Chinese Militarist Pledges Hanoi Help

HONG KONG (UPI) — Yang Cheng-wu, the fastest-rising figure in China's military hierarchy, pledged that the Chinese army would provide all-out support to North Vietnam "until complete victory is won," the New China News Agency reported today.

The army newspaper "Liberation Army Daily" backed up Yang's pledge in an editorial published in connection with the 30th anniversary of the North Vietnamese army.

SAY AHHH — Dr. Michael C. Hartman, marine biologist at the Bodega Marine Laboratory, poses a one-pound lobster being used in a study that could answer some of the world's food problems. The crustaceans are not very bright, but extremely quick to attack and run.

CLEANING UP — Frank Follett, one of a team of marine biologists experimenting with the cultivation of lobsters at Bodega Bay, siphons uneaten brine shrimp from lobster boxes. Otherwise the shrimp would decay, encouraging bacterial growth and disease.

GOURMET ANSWER TO FAMINE?

Lobster Farming In Bodega Bay

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

BODEGA BAY — Growing seafood to feed the world's rapidly rising population long has been a dream, but never has been done successfully enough to make a real dent in the need for protein in the human diet.

A team of scientists here at the University of California's Bodega Marine Laboratory hope to find the answers to problems that have plagued the dream of "mariculture." Their allies in the search are some 2,000 Homarus americanus — better known as that delicious luxury, the Atlantic coast lobster.

The crustacean was not chosen to make it as common as chicken on the American dinner plate, but because it is uniquely hardy from birth, thus a more stable target of study and experimentation.

The immediate goal of the project is to make it economically feasible to raise a one-pound lobster in two to three years. It takes five to eight years in nature.

The long-range goal is to develop a technology for mariculture that can be applied as well to other seafood, a technology that will tell commercial cultivators of seafood how to deal with water quality, nutrition, algae, genetics, physiology, disease, engineering and economics.

The project has been in full swing for little more than a year, and probably will take at least five to get results, according to Dr. Michael C. Hartman, who is in charge of its studies of food chains and algae. With an annual budget of several hundred thousand dollars, the project is funded two-thirds by the state and the rest by the federal government.

Annual appropriations for the project are made by the state Legislature.

Hartman, 32, noted the team of 18 to 20 scientists working on the project (the number varies) already is looking as well into other problems, such as developing a hatchery for Dungeness crab to replenish the diminishing crop in the sea, and reclaiming wastes from the lobsters and using it to "fertilize" algae that in turn feed clams, oysters and scallops.

The main laboratory, housed in a chilly concrete building on a windy headland, is a maze of plexiglass boxes which are home to the lobsters, rows of fiberglass tubs used to grow the lobster larvae, and a spaghetti of tubes and pipes recirculating seawater to keep it pure. Other rooms, some outdoor shelters built by the scientists themselves, house specialists investigating the effects of diet and temperature on the lobster.

A shiny macaroni machine inhabits one office, and is used to extrude a sort of finger food for the lobster. Seems they like to hold their food and bite off just enough to chew at one time.

Developing a cheap food is a major issue in the study, since cost has a lot to do with whether raising lobster can be done economically. They prosper on live brine shrinp, but the shrimp cost $4 a pound. By the time a lobster reaches one pound in weight, he will have consumed 10 to 15 pounds of the tiny shrimp.

The project had been importing pregnant lobsters from the East, but now has succeeded in breeding them in the laboratory. With each pregnant lobster producing 5,000 to 50,000 larvae, it doesn't take too many to keep the project supplied.

Hartman proudly pointed out the project already has determined the best water temperature, diagnosed and controlled fungus and blood diseases, and tested 18 diets consisting of such goodies as shrimp waste, soybean and peanut meal and whole egg solids, and figured out how much space each lobster needs as it grows.

Each lobster gets its separate space to prevent cannibalism when molting. A lobster may have changed shells 20 times by the time he weighs one pound, and is vulnerable while between shells. Lobsters eat their own shells after molting in order to reclaim the calcium for their next shell.

Most of the lobsters in the laboratory are young and average perhaps two to three inches in length. The big exceptions are Bert and Bertha, mammoth imports from the East coast. Bert, 40 to 50 years old, is the largest at 25 pounds.

The scientists will try to mate Bert and Bertha, but nutritionalist Douglas E. Conklin said they were there primarily because "it's kind of nice to have a big one around to see what your goal is."

Hartman explained that the lobster never has been transplanted successfully to the Pacific coast because the ocean here is too cold.

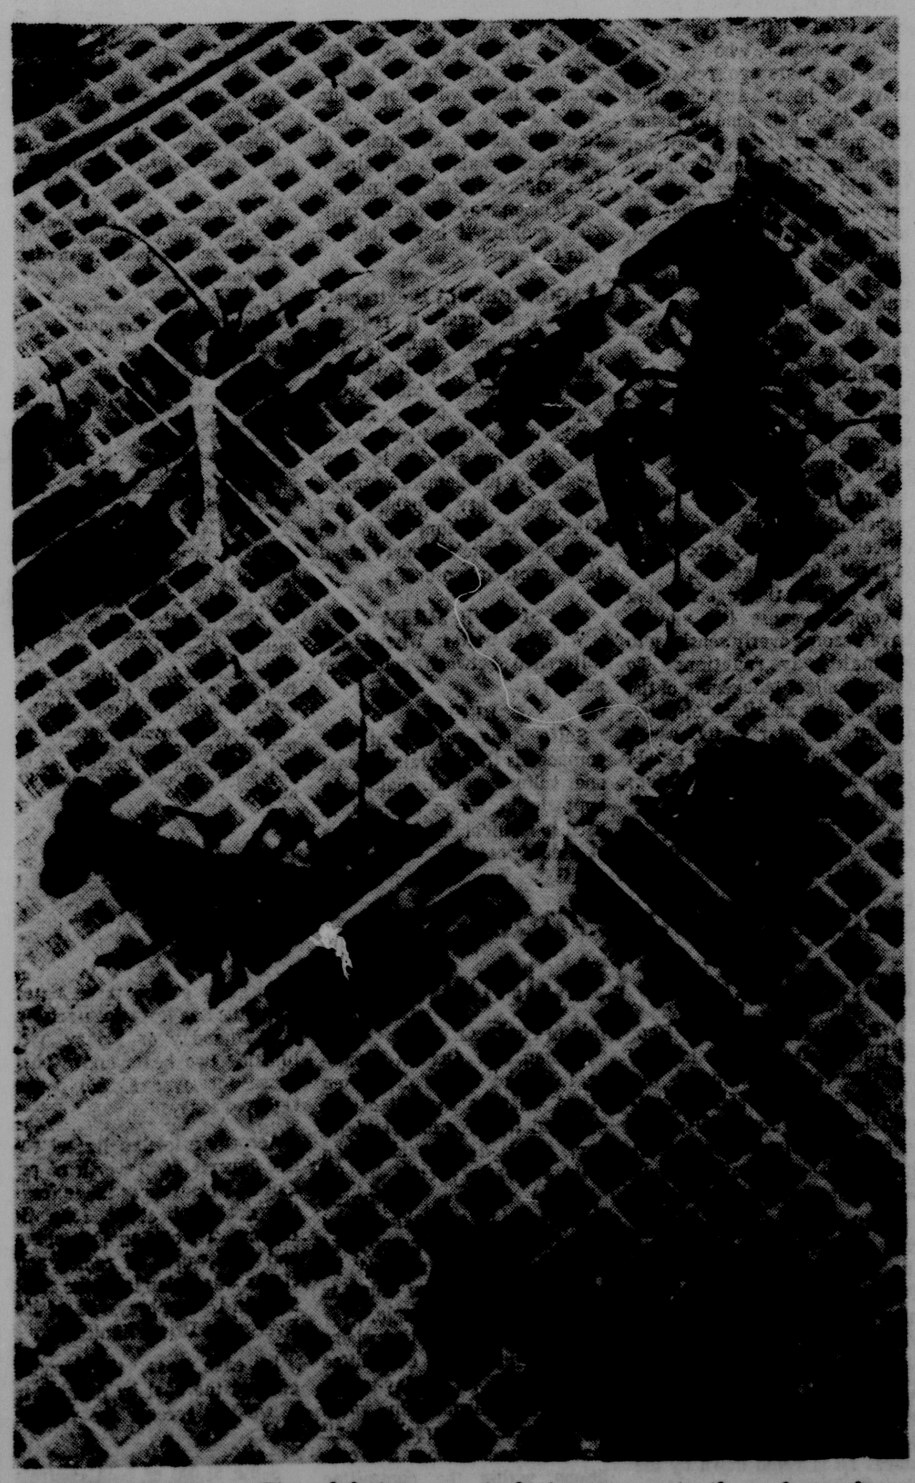
The project, he said, is the largest ever conducted anywhere. A smaller one is being done at San Diego State University on raising fish in heated water discharged by power plants, he added.

Heating seawater three to six degrees, Hartman said, has been found to speed growth of the lobsters. Warming it further adds to growth, but then increases disease, he said. Disease control is critical with so many of the labsters close to one another.

Eliminating cannibalism, Hartman reported, has meant that 60 per cent of the larvae should survive to adulthood, reaching the one-pound size. In nature, only one of 100,000 reach adulthood.

Hartman declined to assure that the project will succeed, but insisted he was "optimistic." Already planned is a $1 million expansion of the Bodega Marine Laboratory, and Hartman predicted the project will grow to fill much of the new space.

He and Conklin noted none of the lobsters are old enough to be tested yet for the quality of their meat, but said "we'll all volunteer when we get to that stage."



HOME SAFE — Tiny lobsters, two and three inches long, inhabit private, plexiglas cubicles. The isolation prevents them from devouring each other when molting their outgrown shells.

Corte Madera's Mayor Sued For Dissolution

Diana R. Flahive, the wife of Corte Madera Mayor Robert J. Flahive, has filed for dissolution of the couple's 11-year marriage.

She cited irreconcilable differences in filing the Marin Superior Court petition Friday.

According to the petition, the couple was married Aug. 31, 1963, in Illinois, and separated Friday. There are two children — Brian J., 9, and Steven C., 6.

The family home is at 16 Endeavor Drive, Corte Madera. Flahive first won election to the town council in 1972 and has been mayor since last March.

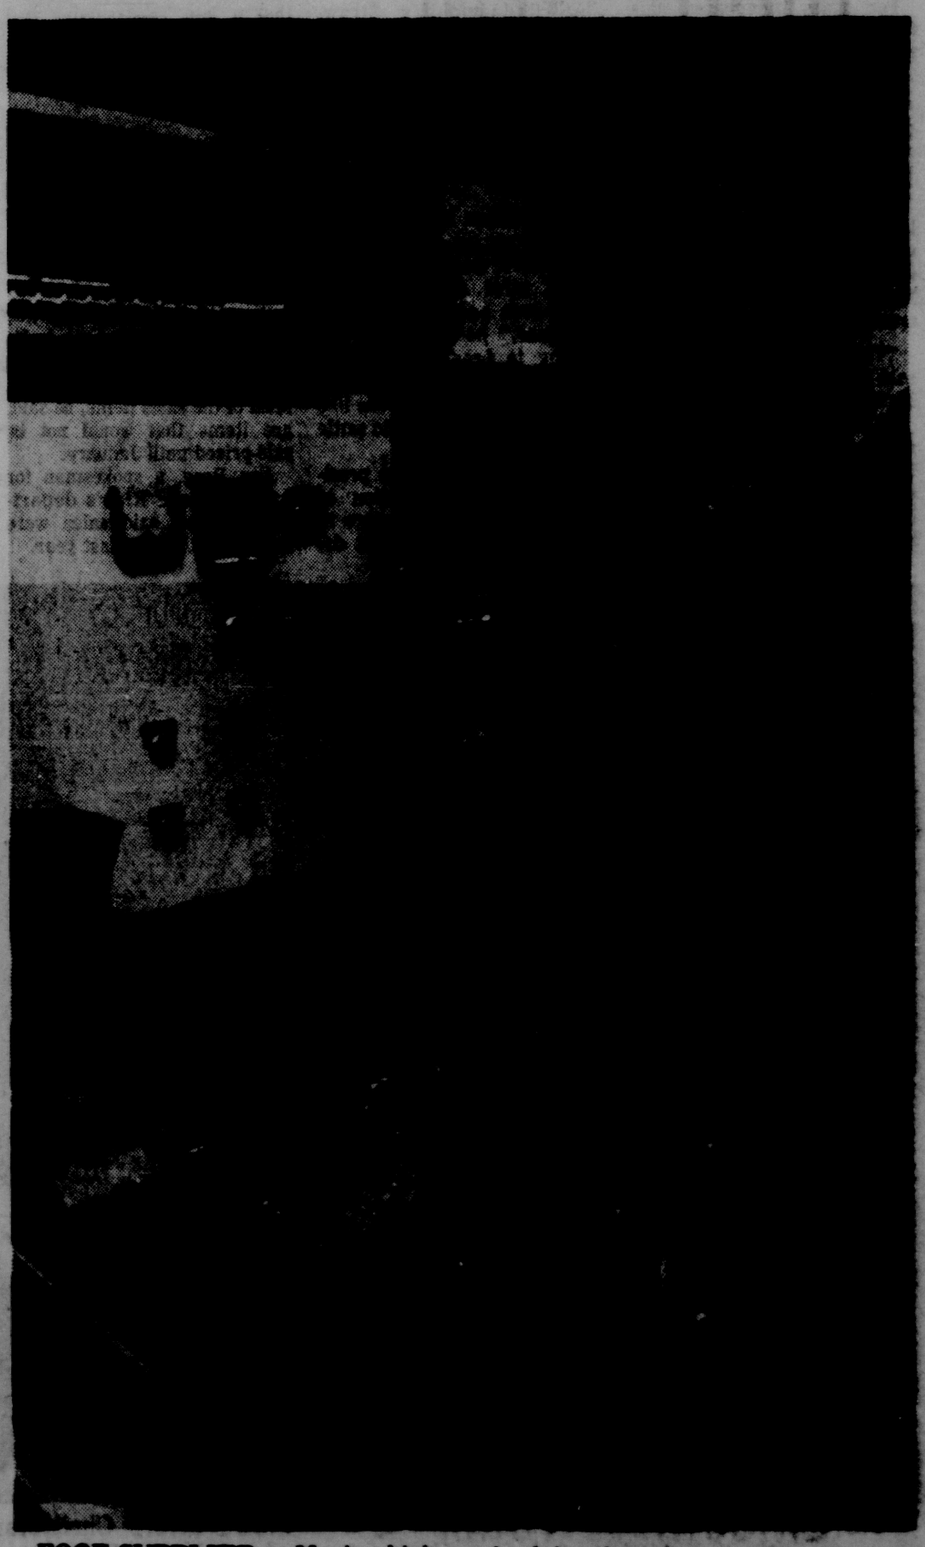
He works as a publishers representative in San Francisco.

Fatal Avalanche Spurs Inquiry

KITZBUEHEL, Austria (UPI) — Nine skiers killed in an avalanche evidently ignored dangerous conditions, police said, but a local court began an inquiry anyway to find out whether the usual warning signs were actually posted.

The disaster occurred Saturday on the slopes of Steinberghogel, one of the most popular skiing areas of Kitzbuehel, but noted for being extremely dangerous when temperatures are above freezing.

The victims were five West Germans and four Austrians. Four other skiers survived.



FOOD SUPPLIER — Marine biologist Duglas Conklin tends the macaroni machine that extrudes food for the lobsters. They like to hold it and bite off a mouthful.

Nixon Pays New York Back Taxes

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York State tax officials today disclosed that former President Richard M. Nixon owed $11,544 in back taxes for 1969 and had made payment in full last week.

State Tax Commissioner Mario A. Procaccino said the taxes were owed on a reportable gain from the sale of Nixon's Manhattan apartment in 1969.

"We found no evidence of fraud on the part of the former President," Procaccino said.

The commissioner said the determination on the amount owed by Nixon was made earlier this month after an eight-month investigation by the tax department.

Procaccino said the amount owed by Nixon included "all taxes, interest and penalties for the year 1969."

He said under provisions of state law, it normally would be unlawful for the department to divulge information on tax matters but said that the former President, through his counsel, had waived this prohibition.

The state investigation leading to the determination that Nixon owed the money began last April 25 when Procaccino wrote to the former President requesting information on Nixon's taxes while he was a resident of New York prior to assuming the presidency.

Procaccino's request came after a determination by a special congressional committee earlier that month that Nixon owed more than $500,000 in back federal taxes, interest and penalties. It was also disclosed at that time that Nixon had paid no California state taxes while in the White House, although his legal voting residence remained in that state.

After a lengthy investigation headed by Procaccino, the former President was notified on Dec. 6 that he owed the state $11,544.17, the commissioner said.

"In arriving at this figure, we have taken into account that former President Nixon was a resident of New York State for a certain period of time in 1969 and that the sale of his apartment in New York did result in a reportable gain for that year," Procaccino said.

"On Dec. 17, we received an acceptance of our determination and payment in full," the commissioner said.

The waiver given by Nixon through his attorney, Dean S. Butler, for public disclosure of his tax status was restricted. The statement read by Procaccino was approved beforehand by Butler.

Among the specific topics Procaccino refused to discuss — under the agreement with Butler — were the amount Nixon sold his apartment for, the profit he made on the transaction and tax returns for other years during which Nixon was a resident of New York State.

Procaccino did say that all Nixon's records were reviewed in his investigation and that as far as the state is concerned, "the case is now closed."

On the wall opposite Procaccino as he spoke in his offices at the World Trade Center was a picture of Procaccino and his wife, Nixon and his wife and John Connally, the former Treasury Secretary.

The picture, taken at Connally's Texas ranch in September 1972, was inscribed "To Maria and Mario Procaccino with appreciation and best wishes."

AFFAIRS OF STATE — President Gerald A. Ford discusses the import of the season with a Santa Claus at Vail, Colo. The President took to the ski slope today at the start of a two-week family vacation.

Ford Skis And Spills In Frigid Colorado

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — Shortly after he arrived for a Christmas holiday with his family, President Ford dressed in a bright orange ski jacket and headed for the slopes.

His first run was the Simba trail, considered one of the most difficult. About 100 skiers and 50 reporters and cameramen followed him.

The President had said he wanted to be regarded as one more skier, but there was no lift line and he said he was surprised.

It had been arranged by the Secret Service for his protection.

A cheer went up from the crowd as Ford easily swung into a lift chair. Despite the pleas of Secret Service agents, he was followed down the slope by many skiers. He shook a number of hands.

Hoeger said Ford took a spill near the top of the mountain. Ford describes himself as in the intermediate class, but one Vail pro described him as "a good recreational skiier and getting better all the time."

The skiers around said this was some of the best weather Vail has had in years. New snow had fallen and the temperature on the mountain was about zero, with a breathtaking 20 mile per hour wind sweeping the 8,000-foot peaks.

Although this is Ford's first vacation since becoming President, he had some work to do — the 150 bills passed by Congress when it adjourned and the proposals on the economy and energy which he must give to the new Congress in January.

Ford told reporters that he planned to work about three hours each morning, then head for the slopes in the afternoon.

The Fords leased a seven-bedroom house at Vail owned by Texas oil man Richard C. Bass because there three-bedroom condominium was too small and not up to security standards.

The entire family will be on hand to exchange presents on Christmas Eve after they attend church services.

Rockies, Northern States Expect White Christmas

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The first day of winter brought snow from the Rocky Mounains to Lake Superior and parts of New England, but there were few omens of a white Christmas elsewhere in the nation.

An avalanche warning was issued for the Colorado mountains and travelers were warned to avoid steep slopes, gullies and narrow valleys because of the threat of avalanche.

Portions of North Dakota received five inches of new snow in the latest storm — the first of the winter season. The storm dropped three inches of new snow on Hibbing, Minn., bringing the snowcover there to 11 inches.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect today from the Montana Rockies to the Minnesota shore of Lake Superior and at least four inches of new snow were forecast.

Winds of up to 40 miles per hour piled up drifts and obscured visibility.

Snow was forecast today for the northern border states from Montana to Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Light snow dusted the northern Atlantic Coast. Two inches of new snow at Portland, Maine, brought the snowcover to five inches.

There were fair skies in the southern two thirds of the country. Wind gusts of up to 50 miles per hour buffeted the interior of Southern California, making travel hazardous.

Unseasonably warm weather, which pushed the mercury as high as 60 in Kansas and Missouri, was dispelled by a wintry blast which dropped temperatures by as much as 20 degrees in a few hours but no snow was forecast for the area.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Fear of Going Out Is Common, Difficult For Doctor To Treat

Are you deathly afraid of public places or leaving your home? Do you order your groceries by phone? If you are comfortably only when in the confines of your home, you may be suffering from agoraphobia (fear of open spaces).

This common syndrome, which is manifested by severe, incapacitating anxiety, is common in Britain. And although I seldom read about it in American medical journals, I get enough mail from the families and friends of agoraphobics to know that it exists in thie country, too.

THE FOLLOWING is an excerpt from a letter I received:

"My neighbor, who was widowed two years ago, refused to leave her house. Anything that needs doing gets done by phone. Her married children visit her regularly. This woman's daughter told me that her mother's nerves make it impossible for her to go to the supermarket, hairdresser or theater. She assures me that her mother's mind is as keen as ever and that she is only depressed when she leaves her home.

"This woman's physician has agreed to make periodic house-calls to check on her, and the woman is perfectly agreeable to this arrangement."

THE INABILITY to travel (especially to the phsyician's office) explains why agoraphobia is not often diagnosed.

We suspect that agoraphobia develops because the victims have become overly sensitive to normal body reactions. To them, a slight quickening of the heartbeat is an attack of palpitation; irregular beats, which are normally ignored, herald the beginning of a heart attack; mild faintness signals impending death. Indeed, a victim is stricken with panic if someone slams a door.

These exaggerated responses to normal stimuli are the basis for the victim's fear. The agoraphobic is certain that he will panic or harm will come to him if he leaves the house. Just thinking about an attack of giddiness, weakness or palpitation frightens him. The mounting tension may stiffen his muscles, making it impossible for him to move.

AGORAPHOBIA is extremely difficult to treat. It requires complete understanding, patience and the ability to convince the sufferer that he can cope with his fears. Taking walks with a friend or relative may be the answer to your neighbor's problem. You might mention to her daughter that Librium or Valium help. I'm sure her physician knows about these prescription drugs.

SULFUR, SULFA

W. T. A. writes: What is the difference between sulfa and sulfur?

REPLY

Sulfa drugs are synthetic compounds that contain at least one sulfur radical. Sulfur, a nonmetallic, yellow element, is used in medications for treating skin diseases.

Merchants Aren't Jolly This Yule

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

For many merchants, this Christmas season gives little reason to be jolly.

Most stores were hoping that a big shopping burst in the last days before Christmas would push sales up to respectable levels.

"Business is slow. It will be a late Christmas but we look forward to ending up pretty strongly," a spokesman for New York's Gimbel's department store said.

"The vibes seem to be good," said a spokesman for the rival Macy's store.

"There is a particular demand for quality merchandise. We never prognosticate about Christmas until the figures are in because a lot of things can happen between now and then. This week is strategic."

At Philadelphia's Strawbridge and Clothier department store, sales were running "exactly even" with last year toward the end of last week. A spokesman said today and tomorrow "are going to tell the tale. Nobody will know until its all over."

A spokesman for Sakowitz, a large downtown Houston specialty store, was pessimistic.

"On total activity, we're about even on the board with last year," he said. "But it's nothing to brag about. We're not happy because being even is not our goal. But it looks like a lot of stores will have to settle for that."

Terry McDonald, vice president for sales promotion at Cain-Sloan department store in Nashville, Tenn., said that despite efforts to inform shoppers that a late Thanksgiving had shortened the Christmas shopping period by a week, people are waiting until the last minute.

"So far, our sales have been 'respectable,'" McDonald said. "There's no reason to go and jump off the building. It's not as great as last year, which was a record-breaker across the country."

He said that the store was forced for the first time in its history to hold major, storewide sales to attract customers. Most of the sales items, he said, are items that would not be sale-priced until January.

Ann Berg, a spokesman for Atlanta-based Rich's department stores, said sales were down slightly from last year.

"More people are looking at quality. They don't know what the economy will do so thay want to get things that will last. Shoppers are being more selective — asking more questions and spending more time comparing items," Mrs. Berg said.

But Sears — the Chicago-based mail order and retail chain —expected record sales.

"We've realized from our many years of experience that in times of recession, people tend to shop later," a Sears spokesman said. "Then, they figure their budget for the year is gone and, what the heck.

"It's sort of an expandable budget concept. People figure that Christmas comes but once a year and one or two more presents aren't going to break them no matter how bad things are."

Secret Ballot Opposed For Electing Chairman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., who inherited the chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee from Wilbur Mills, says electing chairmen by secret ballot of their committee would be "getting back to the jungle."

"Rather than being a reform that would be a step down to the destruction of our whole Democratic procedures," Ullman said yesterday in an interview with UPI Audio.

Under House tradition, when a chairman retires, the next senior member of the majority party assumes the top post unless he is voted down by the House caucus.

That tradition elevated Ullman when Mills decided to give up the most powerful chairmanship in Congress.

Ullman, an Oregon Democrat, spoke forcefully when asked what he thought of the proposal that committee members elect a new chairman when a vacancy occurs.

"A lot of people are saying that reform means taking away all of the existing procedures that provide for stability," he said. "What you are doing is getting back to the jungle.

"If you had a situation where the chairman of a committee had to hold on a day-to-day basis his chairmanship, you'd be subjecting yourself to all kinds of machinations and coalitions within the committee and all kinds of bloc movements that would completely destroy the capacity to make decisions."

Burglars Hit San Rafael Waterfront

Burglars struck three times along the San Rafael waterfront last Thursday or Friday, victimizing two boats and a boat house for over $2,500, police reported today.

According to San Rafael police reports, $950 worth of radios and clocks was taken from the docked boat of John G. Dickow, 47, of San Francisco, and $598 worth of radios and clocks was stolen from the craft of John L. Umphreys, 69, of 206 Evergreen Drive, Kentfield.

In each case, the burglar entered the boat by pushing in a window screen, the reports said.

Some $1,000 of boat controls and batteries was stolen from the Marin Boat House, 115 Third Street, by a burglar using bolt cutters, police said.

Three Brothers Die In Freezer

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (UPI) — Three young brothers died yesterday when they locked themselves in an unused freezer cabinet.

The boys, David, 7, John 6, and Richard, 3, were the only children of Dr. Colin Tourelle of Oamaru, about 50 miles from Dunedin on the South Island.

A neighbor found the boys, one of them still alive, in the 12-cubic-feet freezer, which Tourelle kept in his garage to store dog meat.

Two of the brothers were dead when the neighbor opened the cabinet and the third died soon after. They apparently died of suffocation, police said.

TV COMMERCIALS

The Fertility Rite Of Americans

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — American consumers watching commercials on television have a lot in common with Swazi tribesmen participating in fertility rites.

"Civilized man accused tribal peoples of being superstitious, magically minded and irrational in their rituals — but modern commercials bear all the hallmarks of rituals," says Dr. Merlin Myers, an anthropologist at Brigham Young University.

Both utilize symbolism, mysticism and the value systems of the culture to which they are geared.

Just as the Swazi believe a certain dance will bring rain, American consumers submit to a certain "Mystical mentality, becoming convinced that a record album or toothpaste will bring romance, that a candy bar will bring social acceptance, or that a certain brand of makeup will immediately transform a woman into a South Seas island beauty."

"The Iroquois sing ove their seeds. Others do a rain dance. And we view it as magic," said Myers, chairman of the BYU Department of Anthropology and Archaeology, who has spent nearly two decades studying tribal cultures.

"But such things are not one whit more magical than what we see and are led to believe in our ads."

The main differences between tribal rites and "secular consumption rituals" lie in their industrial, sexual and religious aspects.

Whereas nonindustrial cultures are mainly concerned with production, American society concentrates on consumption.

"Tribal rituals reflect the basic concern of producing enough food to sustain life. If the crop fails, the people starve. So they pray to the spirit of vegetation and to the Creator that the crop won't fail," said Myers.

"Our concern, on the other hand, has not been with production — at least not until now with all our shortages. Our concern has been with consuming what we produce. To keep the wheels of industry turning, we consume ourselves into prosperity and happiness," he said.

Such concern dominates American advertising, which promises certain rewards and even salvation for consuming a specific product, he explained. Many of these rewards are sexual.

"Advertisers are well aware that sex roles are poorly defined here and use this fact to their advantage," said Myers.

"If a man can't get masculinity in society, he is made to believe he can get it in a mystical ritual way by smearing some commercial product all over himself or buying a rugged type of a car."

American men need an "outside" assertion of their masculinity because, unlike tribal cultures where male-female roles are clearly established, men and women in the United States are doing the same thing, said Myers.

Tribal ritual dramatizes the sexual dichotomy by assigning specific roles to men and women participating in the rites.

Such rituals have religious connotations.

"Tribal rites are more of a prayer than a technical act. They express important information to the people and appeal for help to the supernatural," said Myers.

Advertising, on the other hand, is secular because Americans are not supernaturally oriented.

Both promise the desired end result if a certain prescribed pattern is followed, or damnation if it is not — "unless you use a certain toothpaste, your teeth will rot," or in tribal cultures, "unless you perform a certain ritual, your crops will fail."

Both reflect cultural values and needs. Both are means of mass communication, both utilize people's superstitious beliefs, and both are necessary, he said.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Show About Navajos Full Of Sensitivity

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBC Television network is taking care of Christmas business tonight with "Scrooge," a wonderful 1970 movie musical version of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." Be sure to watch it. But also make certain you stay tuned for NBC's following show, "The Navajo Way," a superb one-hour mood piece about the still-surviving, still-strong traditions and culture of America's largest Indian tribe.

The program, written and narrated in a gentle, low-key manner by Robert (Shad) Northshield, is a far cry from those plight-of-the-Indian television essays which always seem to exhibit more pity than understanding.

This show, while exhibiting its share of compassion for the poverty, disease and alcoholism afflicting the Navajos, puts the emphasis on understanding how they survive in a white man's culture.

The title of the program sums it up: They survive because of the Navajo "way," a culture in which nothing is compartmentalized, in which shearing a sheep requires just as much "religious" ritual as burying a relative.

Their "way" primarily is explained through the lives of a Navajo family and Long Salt, an 85-year-old medicine man. And it is consistently treated with dignity and respect, no doubt because the show is as much a homecoming for Northshield as it is a portrait of Navajo life.

He did a documentary about the tribe for CBS 20 years ago, and draws on it effectively in a series of then-and-now studies with old and new film footage of the people and land he visited in 1954.

For instance, he recalls at the start of the show — with accompanying black-and-white footage — a Navajo baby boy who was dying of infant diarrhea, "the main killer of young Navajo Indians."

The child was brought to Long Salt, rituals and chants performed and "whatever monster lived within the tiny body, it apparently was slain by Long Salt's ministrations," Northshield notes as he shows current film of the boy, now a strapping young man.

As he points out, the medicine man "is tradition and tradition heals. That is the way of these people."

It's a theme he keeps driving home, not only in tracing the Navajo history but also in describing, with a quietly controlled anger, the increasing intrusion of white culture on that of the Navajos.

Northshield and his crew spent six weeks with the Navajos filming on their reservation near the Arizona-Utah border.

They've come up with a show of far more sensitivity than you usually see on the tube. And they deserve many cheers, if not an Emmy award, for the care they put into "The Navajo Way."

Phone Rate Increases Asked Across Nation

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Telephone companies from coast to coast are seeking rate increases for everything from pay-phone calls to installation charges, contending they need the extra money to keep up with inflation.

An Associated Press sampling showed that the requested increases fall into three general categories:

Across-the-board hikes that would boost monthly charges for residential customers by amounts ranging from about 10 to 33 per cent.

Selected increases for installations, extension phones and long-distance calls.

Boosts in the charge for calls from telephone booths. The charges would double, going from a dime to 20 cents.

There are hundreds of telephone companies in the United States, but 80 per cent of the nation's phones are owned and operated by the American Telephone & Telegraph Corp. through its Bell System.

AT&T reported last week that its earnings during the third quarter of this year were 7 per cent higher than in the same period of 1973.

Total revenues during the quarter ended Nov. 30, 1974 were $6.67 billion, compared to $6.04 billion in the same period of 1973. Earnings for the third quarter of 1974 were about $803 million or $1.33 a share, compared to about $762 million or $1.27 a share in the 1973 period.

The company said the volume of long-distance calls and the number of telephones in service went up this year at a slower rate than in 1973. Two rate boosts granted AT&T on Jan. 1 and Oct. 1 helped offset the smaller growth rate. AT&T Chairman John D. deButts also said the company would cut back on construction next year, but added: "In every jurisdiction where it is necessary, we shall be making a vigorous representation of our needs for higher rates."

Rate increases are pending in areas including Pennsylvania, Nevada, Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, Virginia, Florida, Colorado, Arkansas, Wyoming, California, Delaware, Utah, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Washington, Oregon, Hawaii and Alabama.

A Wild Finish In Oakland

From what I saw over the last two days, there should be an outstanding offensive football show Sunday at the Oakland Coliseum when the Raiders and Pittsburgh Steelers take that final step toward a spot in the Super Bowl.

It is impossible, however, to expect a game to match the dramatics of last Saturday's contest in the coliseum. That 28-26 Raider victory over the Miami Dolphins was one of the most exciting finishes I've ever seen. It left most of the crowd at the coliseum gasping for breath.

KEN STABLER

The Raider clubhouse after the game was a mob scene. The players were shouting and whooping it up at first, but then after a few moments seemed more subdued. They were already thinking about the week ahead. They were emotionally drained and wanted to get out of the dressing room and have a few moments to savor the triumph but you knew they were already thinking ahead.

Clarence Davis, the running back who made that miraculous catch in the end zone with 26 seconds left in the game, had to talk about that play over and over again as wave after wave of writers huddled around him. Every time some of them moved away to find another player, more writers would gather.

HE PATIENTLY tried to describe the play: "I saw Kenny (Stabler) was being tackled and he was trying to get the ball to me. I knew the pass didn't have much on it and I knew I would really have to fight for it. Somebody else got their hands on it but I pulled it away."

After he pulled the ball to his chest and fell to the turf, the Raider fans went wild. And after hearing replays of the action as described by Raider announcer Bill King, I know that King nearly went wild also.

Davis saved Stabler from all the second-guessers. If his desperation pass had been intercepted the Raiders would have lost and Stabler would have been criticized for throwing a panic pass. But since it was caught, he comes out a hero. That's how it is in sports.

Most of the fans and many of the writers felt the game was virtually over but I stayed glued to my seat. I remembered about a game I saw just a month earlier when University of California scored a touchdown to go ahead of Stanford, 20-19 with exactly the same time reamining in the game, 26 seconds.

In those 26 seconds Stanford drove to the Cal 33 and Mike Langford kicked a last second 50-yard field goal to win the game, 22-20.

Miami had 26 seconds left and they also had a tie salesman who makes his money during the fall and winter months kicking field goals. With Garo Yepremian rubbing his bald head on the sidelines, I knew it wasn't over.

But when Raider linebacker Phil Villapiano intercepted Bob Griese's last pass in the middle of the field it really was over. The Raiders had dethroned the champions. Yes, the king was dead.

ASKED IF IT was the Raiders' biggest win since he has been around, coach John Madden said, "None can compare with this one because none ever meant so much. This was a playoff game against the world champions."

While the Raider dressing room was one of happiness, the Dolphins' room just a few feet away was like a room of death. Much of the talk was in whispers. They weren't used to this. The Dolphin players were the ones seen on national television the last two years pouring champagne on each other after winning Super Bowls.

"Both teams faced defeat in this game," said Griese. "It was just a heck of a ball game. I wish them (the Raiders) good luck."

A few feet away fullback Larry Csonka was sitting down with a small group of writers around him. As he got up to leave for the waiting bus outside, his right arm in a sling because of a sore joint in his elbow, he said, "It's nice that this team will be remembered." He forced a smile.

FOR TOM WICKERT, a Dolphin offensive tackle in his rookie year, there was still sadness although he wasn't around to share in the happiness of the two earlier years. Wickert, a young man who played at Redwood High before Washington State, hurt his right thumb early in the game and had to have it splinted. He had to race out of the dressing room to make the bus.

"It was a hard one to lose," he said. "It came down to a couple of plays. But it's probably harder on these other guys. They've been there . . . this is my first year."

Wickert was used on the Dolphins' kickoff return team and was out there blocking when Nat Moore returned the game's opening kickoff 89 yards for a touchdown.

At that time all the happiness was on the Dolphins' side of the field. At game's end, that emotion changed sides.

Raiders Must Look Ahead But...

i-j Sports

Monday, December 23, 1974 Independent-Journal, 31

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders must look ahead to the Pittsburgh Steelers. But who can forget how they dethroned the Miami Dolphins?

"It will be tough to top that one. It was a classic," defensive tackle Art Thoms said after Saturday's 28-26 National Football League playoff victory.

"The whole character of the two teams showed in the last quarter. Both came back when they had to. But I think they were meant to win," said Bob Griese, the quarterback of Miami's two-time Super Bowl champions.

The playoff opener matching the teams with the best two regular seasons records in the NFL was a sporting rarity, a much-ballyhooed event that managed to exceed expectations.

Oakland's Ken Stabler, falling forward as Miami lineman Vern Den Herder tackled him from behind, threw the winning, eight-yard touchdown pass to running back Clarence Davis with 26 seconds remaining. But through experience, the Raiders held their breaths until after linebacker Phil Villapiano intercepted a Griese pass with 13 seconds left.

Stabler completed completed 20 passes for 293 yards and threw four touchdown passes through Miami's battered but proud defense, including two in the final 4½ minutes when the lead changed hands three times.

The Steelers, 32-14 victors over Buffalo yesterday in another playoff opener, will be the underdogs here next Sunday at 1 p.m. in the American Conference championship game. The Raiders beat the Stellers 33-14 in last year's playoffs and handled them 17-0 in a game early this seasons. See Raider game statistics, page 32.

Robertson Has Warning For Minnesota

Foreman Will Have His Work Cut Out

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Isiah Robertson, the linebacking star of the Los Angeles Rams, had a warning for Chuck Foreman and the Minnesota Vikings.

"Chuck Foreman will have his work cut out for him next Sunday," Robertson promised. "The same thing will happen to Foreman that happened to Larry Brown."

In a rematch of two teams that met here Nov. 24, the Rams and the Vikings will go at each other at Bloomington, Minn., but there's more at stake this time.

They'll be battling for the National Football Conference title and a trip to New Orleans for the Super Bowl IX Jan. 12.

"We'll be well prepared for them," said Rams rushing star Lawrence McCutcheon, "and I think we'll take it from them."

"We've just got to forget about the weather there," added quarterback James Harris. "I think we can win."

The Rams ended the Washington Redskins' season yesterday with a come-from-behind 19-10 victory — the first Los Angeles playoff triumph since Dec. 23, 1951. On that day, the Rams defeated the Cleveland Browns 24-17 on a 73-yard pass from Norm Van Brocklin to Tom Fears for the National Football League title.

They had lost five playoff games since their last playoff win.

Merlin Olsen, Los Angeles' premier 13-year defensive tackle, remembered something the Redskins' George Allen used to preach when he was head coach here.

"George always says if you turn the ball over six times, that's the game," Olsen noted.

Washington made exactly six turnovers, three fumbles and three pass interceptions, and that was the game. The Redskins committed five of their turnovers in the second half.

Steelers 32, Bills 14

"The best game I've ever had in the pros," Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw mused after his deadly second-period passing set up three short Franco Harris touchdown runs that buried the Bills and pushed Pittsburgh into the American Football Conference showdown in Oakland.

Bradshaw hit seven of nine passes in the 26-point second-quarter burst and wound up completing 12 of 19 passes for 203 yards and rushing five times for 48 yards.

Vikings 30, Cardinals 14

"John Gilliam is the best receiver I've ever worked with," said Fran Tarkenton, whose two touchdown passes to the Minnesota wide receiver led the Vikings past the St. Louis Cardinals and into the National Football Conference championship game for the second year in a row.

"I've played with some great ones, like Homer Jones at New York, but Gillie is the best in football," added Tarkenton, who found Gilliam with a 16-yard game-tying pass late in the first half and a 38-yarder in a third quarter that put the game out of reach.

Jim Hart put the Cards on the scoreboard first, passing 13 yards to Earl Thomas for a touchdown late in the half. They didn't score again until the final minute.

UNORTHODOX FORM — Rams' wide receiver Harold Jackson cartwheeled away from Redskins' defender Brig Owens after catching a 29-yard pass. Lance Rentzel of the Rams and Mike Bass of the Redskins closed in yesterday during the first quarter. (UPI Telephoto)

HIGH SCHOOL ROUNDUP

San Marin Cagers Win Petaluma Tourney Title

San Marin High School, which started the Petaluma Classic with no wins and six losses, finished with two wins and the championship of that four-team basketball tournament.

Junior guard Steve Ghirardo sank three free throws in the final 27 seconds to insure a 63-59 victory over Orland in the title game Saturday night. Ghirardo's two free throws with 22 seconds left had given San Marin a 40-38 win over Piner of Santa Rosa in the tourney opener Friday night.

Piner came back to beat Petaluma 64-45 in the battle for third place. In other games Saturday involving Marin County Athletic League teams, Marin Catholic salvaged seventh place in the Rose City tournament at Santa Rosa with an 84-63 win over Crestmoor of San Bruno, and Redwood lost to Bishop O'Dowd of Oakland, 66-51, in a battle for third place in the Amador Valley Classic at Pleasanton.

For San Marin, it was the steady ball handling of Ghirardo and the accurate outside shooting of forward Brian Duncan that spelled the difference. Both were named to the all-tourney team. Duncan led the Mustangs with 16 points, followed by Ghirardo with 13 and center Jeff Metteer with 10.

Center Kevin Kratzer led Orland with 16 points and was named all-tourney.

San Marin coach Andy Frauenhofer said later that he was "very pleased with the whole tournament. We're just starting to reach our potential."

Marin Catholic 84, Crestmoor 63

The Wildcats breezed to victory after losing their first two tourney games. Forward Tim Hurley pumped in 25 points to give him 60 in three games and a position on the all-toruney team. He also had 16 rebounds in the two and one-half quarters he played.

Midway through the third quarter Marin Catholic coach Joe Burke sent in the second team, which, sparked by Dave

3 West Coast Powers Undefeated

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The West Coast's three nationally ranked college basketball teams came through the weekend still unbeaten, but only the Oregon Ducks did it the easy way.

Third-ranked UCLA trailed No. 12 Notre Dame by 16 points early in the second half before Richard Washington got hot and led the Bruins to an 85-72 victory Saturday night. No. 7 Southern California won its own Trojan Classic, edging New Mexico 84-74 in a see-saw championship game.

Coach Dick Harter's Oregon club, 4-0 and ranked 19th, had the week off and returns to action by facing Villanova tonight.

UCLA's Washington scored 18 of his 25 points in the second half against Notre Dame, which had built up a 19-point lead during the first half when Adrian Dantley scored 20 points. The comeback victory stretched UCLA's homecourt winning streak to 71 games.

The Trojans were led in scoring by Gus Williams and Bob Trowbridge, with 16 points each. New Mexico shot a blazing 62 per cent from the field in the first half, and the lead changed hands six times in the second half.

Other highlights of the Saturday college basketball action on the West Coast included Long Beach State's 74-62 victory over previously unbeaten Michigan State in the finals of the Cable Car Classic. Bob Gross and freshman Larry Hudson scored 17 and 16, respectively, for the tournament champs.

University of San Francisco downed Santa Clara, 81-66, for third place in the Cable Car Classic. Tony Styles scored 25 and Marlon Redmond 22 to pace the winners. Eddie Joe Chavez, a Drake High School graduate, scored five points, and Jerry Piro, a Redwood product, added four for Santa Clara.

Stanford of the Pac-8 suffered a 77-74 homecourt loss to Utah State, but Oregon State trounced Samford of Florida, 87-66. Washington State ran into brothers Larry and Keith Herron of Villanova, who combined for 52 points and beat the Cougars 92-83 at the Kentucky Invitational, and Washington's Huskies were 88-77 losers to Virginia Tech in the Michigan Invitational.

Pacific guard Keith Young scored 29 points and led the Tigers past Los Angeles State, 88-62; Nevada-Reno downed Sacramento State 85-68, led by Kevin Goetz' 22 points; University of California at Santa Barbara's Don Ford scored 27 points in a 72-62 victory over Montana, and Nevada-Las Vegas' Lewis Brown had 22 points and 22 rebounds in a 99-88 triumph over Illinois State.

Loyola and UC-Riverside were other winners, but Portland upset Seattle 72-69 despite 36 points from the Chieftains' Frank Oleynick.

POOR PUPIL, PRO PITCHER

Hunter Has Come Long Way Since School Days

AHOSKIE, N. C. (AP) — The smartest thing Jim Hunter ever did was play dumb in school. While his classmates were in the school lineup every day, Hunter appeared on a less regular basis, sort of like a relief pitcher.

"I didn't care anything for school," Hunter said. "I'd much rather go hunting or fishing."

He hasn't changed much. Now, he'd much rather go hunting or fishing than negotiate. But for the possibility of becoming the highest paid player in baseball history, Hunter will hang up his gun and fishing pole for another week.

The Montreal Expos, the Atlanta Braves and the Minnesota Twins were coming around today to give Hunter a lesson in multi-year contracts, tax shelters, deferred payments and the like.

His eighth grade teacher would be impressed.

"I was late for class one day," Catfish remembers, "and my teacher was waiting at the door when I came in. "Jim, why do you waste your time throwing baseballs,' she asked me. 'You know you're not going to make any money that way.'"

There's a lesson in there somewhere because soon Catfish Hunter will sign a contract with one of 20 teams that is wooing him and, in doing so, prove to his eighth grade teacher there is a profit in throwing baseballs.

Watching him tinker around his spacious brick ranch house in nearby Hertford, you wouldn't know that this man, the youngest of 10 children, was about to become a millionaire.

By becoming a free agent, ex-Oaklander Hunter's value has certainly gone up, but his values have remained the same.

"I've been in baseball a long time," said Peter Bavasi, vice president and general manager of the San Diego Padres, one of 13 teams to have thus far negotiated with Hunter for the purpose of signing him.

"So many players attain success, then immediately change as people. They don't want to go home again," Bavasi said.

"But Jim Hunter isn't like that at all. He's a man who hasn't lost his appreciation for his friends or for his home. It's all very touching. Here's a man who is being offered the world, and all he really wants for himself is to be able to hunt and fish and to be able to provide education and lifetime security for his kids.

Flyers' Star Goalie Does Not Rest On His Laurels

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Bernie Parent, winner of the Most Valuable Player award in last season's Stanley Cup playoffs, isn't the kind of guy who rests on his laurels.

If anything, the 29-year-old goalie of the Philadelphia Flyers seems intent on bettering his performance of last season when he led the league with 12 shutouts, shared the Vezina Trophy with Chicago's Tony Esposito and captured the Conn Smythe Trophy as the outstanding player in the Stanley Cup competition.

Parent turned in his sixth shutout of the year last night when he stopped 24 shots while leading the Flyers to a 4- 0 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins. The victory enabled the Flyers to equal their club record of 11 straight unbeaten games.

The defending Stanley Cup champions broke loose for three goals in the second period as Rick MacLeish, Reggie Leach and Ross Lonsberry tallied. Bob Kelly made it 4-0 for the Flyers with a 15-foot shot down center at 14:49 of the third period.

In other National Hockey League action, Buffalo blanked Washington 4-0, Atlanta topped the New York Rangers 4-3, the New York Islanders defeated Kansas City 5-2, Boston edged Detroit 5-4, Chicago blanked Toronto 3-0 and Vancouver beat California 6-4.

Sabres 4, Capitals 0

Don Luce scored three goals in the second period to pace the Sabres' triumph. Luce, who scored twice with Buffalo shorthanded, upped his season goal total to 19 as the Sabres improved their record to 23-6-5, the best in the league.

Flames 4, Rangers 3

Curt Bennett's power play goal at 11:11 of the final period lifted Atlanta to victory over the Rangers and gave the Flames possession of second place in Division 1 of the NHL.

Islanders 5, Scouts 2

Billy Harris scored the tiebreaking goal in the third period to lead the Islanders past the Scouts. Harris hammered in his 35-footer only 29 seconds into the final period, breaking a 2-2 deadlock.

Bruins 5, Red Wings 4

Don Marcotte scored with 50 seconds remaining to give the Bruins a 5-4 win over the Red Wings. Marcotte, 10 feet to the right of Detroit goalie Jim Rutherford, fought off a Red Wing defender to pick up Bobby Orr's rebound off the back board and tossed a forehand over the sprawling goalie. Boston's Phil Esposito, who had hat tricks in his previous two games, scored twice within a 2:03 span of the second period, as he raised his career goal output to 500.

Black Hawks 3, Maple Leafs 0

Goalie Tony Esposito stopped 34 shots or his 51st career shutout and fifth this season as the Black Hawks defeated the Maple Leaf.

Vancouver Is Able To Score In Clutch

OAKLAND (UPI) — Vancouver's Ron Lalonde, one of the National Hockey League's smallest players at 5-feet-5, had no trouble explaining the Canucks' stunning 6-4 comeback win over the California Seals last night.

"Last year when a team got us down we stayed down. This year we come back to win."

The Canucks were down 2-1 in the second period until John Gould tied it up with his 16th goal of the season.

"When you're down and get the tying goal it sometimes starts things happening," Lalonde said after the game.

It happened. Within six minutes of Gould's score, Vancouver had three more for a 5-2 lead, thanks to Don Lever, Gerry Meehan and Leon Rochefort.

Lalonde had netted the first goal of the game and he had two assists in the second period burst.

Only two injuries dimmed the triumph for the NHL's Division 2 leaders. Mike Robitaille suffered a hip injury in the first period and a Paul Bordeleau went out with an ankle injury in the third frame.

Warriors Open Homestand Vs. Suns Tonight

OAKLAND (AP) — The Golden State Warriors open a homestand tonight at 7:30 by playing the Phoenix Suns and will remain on the West Coast until the National Basketball Association All-Star game.

One sure starter in the All-Star contest scheduled Jan. 14 at Phoenix is the Warriors' Rick Barry, who continues to lead the league in scoring. He had a 44-point night at New York in one of the team's three victories on a seven-game road trip which ended with a Saturday night loss to Kansas City-Omaha, 107-84.

Despite the 3-4 road trip record, the Warriors held their comfortable five-game lead in the Pacific Division.

Golden State has seven straight home games coming up, with Portland due here Thursday night and Boston on Saturday night this week. They'll go to Seattle for a Jan. 10 game, then return home to play Chicago Jan. 11 before packing their bags again.

NFL CASE

Czar Vows To Appeal

OAKLAND (UPI) — What National Football League players failed to gain in their strike might be won in court, beginning with a federal judge's ruling here.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, here for Saturday's playoff game between the Oakland Raiders and Miami Dolphins, promised an appeal, but the judgment handed down by U.S. District Court Judge William T. Sweigert was stunning.

Sweigert struck down the NFL's so-called "Rozelle Rule," raised questions about the legality of aspects of the annual college draft, and otherwise came down in favor of Joe Kapp, the former quarterback who took his complaint to court.

"It is my opinion that this decision means the NFL Players Association has won its strike," Kapp's lawyer, Moses Lasky, said.

Rozelle conceded, "This is a very, very important case to us," promised to file an appeal and called the ruling "only one man's opinion."

He said he would meet with NFL attorneys this week to start the appeal process.

The ruling came down hardest on the "Rozelle Rule" as "patently unreasonable and illegal." Under the rule, NFL players have been required to complete an option year should their club choose to retain them and then the team which picks them up after the option year must compensate the player's original club.

Sweigert said allowing the option of retaining the player for the additional year was a legitimate protection against players jumping to other clubs.

But he ruled that requiring the new team to compensate for picking up a free agent was unjustifiable, since, in effect, the player's choice of new teams is restrained. Compensation to the old club can be too costly, thus jeopardizing the players' freedom.

The judge also objected to part of the NFL draft rule as "unreasonable and illegal" because college seniors drafted by a team are off limits to other clubs even when the drafting team fails to sign them.

Rozelle indicated he believed the January draft process would remain intact pending a further ruling.

Additionally, Judge Sweigert's summary judgment said the rule giving Rozelle final say in disputes and grievances and a rule penalizing other clubs for tampering also are illegal because they restrict employment choice.

Kapp's suit was filed in March, 1972 and he will carry the judgment forward to a jury trial. The action stems from the New England Patriots' dismissal of Kapp after he played 11 games with them in 1970. Kapp had signed a memorandum, but had refused to sign a standard player's contract.

He was banned from further NFL play, whereupon he sued the NFL and its 26 member teams, asking the court to declare the standard player's contract illegal and to punish the NFL at least $20 million worth.

Marin Tars Top Cuesta Quintet

SAN LUIS OBISPO — The College of Marin Tars overcame illness and injury with brilliant defense Saturday night to defeat Cuesta College, 62-59, and gain a split of a two-game, non-league basketball series.

The Tars left three injured players in Marin when they came here Thursday, and two others plus coach Jim Webster were suffering from heavy colds. Not surprisingly, they lost that night, 49-38.

Their health wasn't much better Saturday night, but their defense was. "In that second half we played outstanding defense," said Webster. "We just refused to let them have good percentage shots." The Tars forced Cuesta into 15 turnovers in the second half.

Forwards John Channell and Willie Barnes led Marin with 17 and 16 points respectively, and each had 12 rebounds to take up the slack in the absence of sore-throated center Mike Dinehart. Tony Parenti, who had been down with a cold, recovered enough to hit 15 points.

Webster had special praise for reserve guard Steve Boro. "He hasn't played that much, but he came off the bench in the second half and really helped direct the team."

The Tars, now 7-3, are at home this week for two games, Friday night against Cabrillo of Aptos, and Saturday night against Cosumnes River of Sacramento. Both games start at 8 o'clock.

HARRIS, HUNTER

Fast Start For Greats

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's a toss-up who had the better weekend, Franco Harris or Jim Hunter, and maybe it's not right to shock them like this, not while they feel so good, anyway, but from now on the odds begin working against them so that both could easily wind up losers after such a dandy start.

Nobody had a better time than Franco Harris yesterday. He had a perfectly wonderful day for the Pittsburgh Steelers, spending it the way he enjoys most by running over all these people getting in his way, doing their best to rough him up and fling him to the ground.

Franco Harris racked up three touchdowns, rumbled the earth under the Buffalo Bills, whose hopes were interred in a 32-14 beating and steered the Steelers into next Sunday's American Conference title game with the Oakland Raiders.

Only one club has managed to shut out the Steelers so far this season and that was the Raiders. They did it, 17-0, in a game played at Pittsburgh. Next Sunday's AFC title-decider willbe played at Oakland, and if you caught the Raiders in that 28-26 pulse-pounder over Miami Saturday, then you know there isn't a better club in the National Football League right now than Al Davis' red-hot crew.

Switching over to Hunter, he enjoyed the weekend, too, just sitting back listening in Ahoskie, N.C.

Usually, Catfish does the pitching. Now he's letting the others do it. They're giving him their best pitch, offering him money, a nice place to live in the summer and even a little bit of heaven thrown in hoping to have him sign with them now that he's a free agent.

Legally, though, it could turn out to be he actually isn't a free agent.

Oakland's Charlie Finley has gone to court seeking to restrain any other club from signing his 28-year-old Cy Young Award winner.

In all likelihood, the court will support the arbitration panel in its ruling that the two-year contract Hunter signed with Finley last winter is null and void.

If I know Charlie Finley, though, he's going to argue, okay, Hunter's 1974-1975 contract has been declared null and void, but he still remains the property of the Oakland A's under baseball's reserve clause.

I'm no lawyer, but it seems to me Finley has an excellent chance of winning his point for several reasons.

Primarily because the Curt Flood case upheld baseball's reserve system and there has been no legislative act by Congress since then to change it.

Secondly because I'm pretty sure Charlie Finley will cite Article 15 of the Basic Agreement between the Players Association and all 24 major league clubs. The agreement, which became effective Jan. 1, 1973 and runs until Dec. 31, 1975, specifically says that during the term of the agreement . . . "neither of the parties will resort to any form of concerted action with respect to issue of the reserve system, and there shall be no obligation to negotiate with respect to the reserve system."

That's pretty plain.

So is paragraph 7a of the Uniform Player's contract which says . . . "the player may terminate this contract . . ." under certain conditions, one of which applied in Hunter's case, but nowhere in the contract does it say the termination can be taken to mean the ballplayer no longer remains the property of the same ball club. He does under conditions of the reserve clause.

In other words, Catfish Hunter may wind up "half-free."

The same way Dick Williams did a year ago in his tug-of-war with Charlie Finley.

Conceivably, Hunter's 74-75 contract could be tossed out by the court, but Finley will still retain the rights to him. He'll be able to sell him, trade him or even negotiate a new contract with him. Imagine that one going to arbitration also. Pretty soon, the A's will be playing all their home games in arbitration court.

Remember when Finley went to court and successfully enjoined Dick Williams from managing any other club. Now he's applying for an injunction preventing Hunter from pitching for anybody else and ultimately the court could back him up. Under baseball's reserve clause, once a player signs with a club, theoretically he belongs to that club forever. This is Charlie Finley's ace in the hole, and although he hasn't told me, I'm pretty sure he's going to play it.

Franco Harris has to have it a little easier.

All he has to do is get past the Oakland Raiders.

JORDAN'S KING HUSSEIN
Assumes West Bank lost forever

Hussein Feels War Chances 'Enormous'

By JOHN K. COOLEY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein of Jordan feels that the possibility of a new Middle East war is "enormous" unless there is some new and decisive political move to head it off soon.

He recognizes that Israel's military superiority is considerable, especially with the latest supplies of U.S. arms, making an Israeli military victory probable. But King Hussein appears to share the belief of most other Arab leaders that such a victory would settle nothing and leave all the major Mideast problems unsolved, especially the core issue of Palestinians.

From background talks with the King and with Jordan Prime Minister Zayed Rifai here, it further appears that Jordan's role would be purely defensive in an eventuality such as an Israeli attack in the Irbid area of northern Jordan in an effort to outflank Syria.

In any case, King Hussein feels, as Israeli attack is more likely than an Arab one and that war could be started by accident. He believes it will be a "very long time" before Arab oil wealth and demographic power can be sufficiently translated into military force to defeat Israel.

King Hussein appears personally greatly saddened over the recent Rabat Arab summit-conference decisions which took away from Jordan the responsibility for the future of 800,000 Palestinians on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and gave it to the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). But he determined loyally to carry out the decisions, including a meeting at the foreign ministers' level of Jordan, Egypt, Syria, and the PLO.

Before Rabat, King Hussein saw an opportunity to move decisively toward peace with Israel, say the top Jordanians, was unwilling or unable to accept an accord except under the condition of leaving Israeli para-military settlements and garrisons on the West Bank amid the Arab population.

King Hussein now is reorganizing his kingdom under the assumption that the West Bank is lost forever. He has dissolved the old Jordan Parliament, half of whose members were West Bankers. He has appointed a new upper house of East Jordanians, and dropped many Palestinians from top cabinet posts.

A government committee now is trying to determine criteria under which the Palestinians residing on the East Bank — more than half the two million people there, including 176,000 refugees in camps — can vote in elections for a new lower house of Parliament. But King Hussein does not intend to force anyone to choose between their present Jordanian nationality and a still nonexistent Palestinian passport.

The Jordanian king has been the object of six known and many other rumored assassination plots since he mounted the throne in 1953. The latest attempt by Palestinian guerrillas was supposed to have taken place during the Rabat summit last October. Presidents Sadat and Nimeiry of Egypt and Sudan and Kings Faisal and Ehsan of Saudi Arabia and Morocco were also intended targets in that plot, it is stated here.

Three groups of assassins entered Morocco. At least one had some guidance from Libya, according to high Jordanian sources. One group set out in a refrigerator truck from Beirut and drove through Europe with documents indicating they were to pick up a cargo of sheepskins in Morocco — truly "wolves in sheep's clothing," as someone here remarked.

Spanish policemen nearly caught them after a road accident. They were finally apprehended by Moroccan police after a trip radioed by Jordanian security.

"I learned from my grandfather (King Abdallah, assassinated by a Palestinian in Jerusalem in 1951), to experience that peace of soul known only to those who are not afraid," King Hussein wrote once. That peace seems to be serving him well, as he girds his kingdom for whatever lies ahead.

READING TESTS — Can the reading development of this Bedford, Mass., fourth grader be measured by standardized tests? (Christian Science Monitor Photo)

Standardized Reading Tests Are Challenged

By CYNTHIA PARSONS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Bill is nine years old. He goes to school in the United States.

If we want to know how many pounds Bill gained last year, we can compare with the scale said last year with what it says this year. Similarly, if we want to know how much taller Bill is this year than last, we can compare his height measurements for the two years.

What if we want to know how much better Bill reads this year than last year. What can we compare?

Many educators say we can compare Bill's scores on a nationally standardized set of tests. That we can give Bill a test in the fall when he is 8 years old and then a variation of that test the following fall and by comparing the two scores know how much Bill has learned about reading in the interim.

Although there have always been some doubts about using commercial, nationally standardized tests in this way, general convenience has overshadowed the test experts' concerns.

But the doubts are increasing and are beginning to surface. Test publishers are being challenged about the validity of their tests, and reading researchers are taking long, cold, hard looks at these batteries of tests and finding them wanting.

Some say that Bill is being "victimized" by the tests. They say that Bill's entire school career may be damaged by schools that use the tests as a key measurement of reading ability.

Some say that although the tests are not accurate they are harmless and help teachers and schools know how individual children as well as whole classrooms are doing.

Newspapers report how well whole school systems are doing based on whether the average reading score one year is better or worse than the year before.

Parents, unhappy about a new and controversial reading program, may use test results in an attempt to go "back" to "old-fashioned" skill training.

Here is one example of the problem: Four schools, all serving the same population, have radically different approaches to the teaching of reading. The children in the area may attend any of the four schools. Not a few parents want to know how the average child in each school does on standardized reading tests before deciding which school their Bill should attend.

But what about the teachers in the four schools? One school staff welcomes the commercial, nationally standardized tests. Their drills are based on the skills tested. Reading instruction in specific skills (like breaking words into syllables) takes up most mornings. Any child falling behind the class is given special tutoring.

The other three school staffs do not feel that the reading programs are similar enough to use the same test. They argue that there are no nationally standardized tests of the type they need.

Their children spend a great deal more time reading books, writing and acting in plays, working with poetry, and writing and reading their own stories. Instead of giving parents average reading scores to show how well their schools are doing, they ask parents and children to visit classrooms and determine first hand whether the pupils are learning to read.

The testing controversy is beginning to heat up. A growing number of conferences are concerned with the way the standardized tests are constructed, how the norms are computed, how fair the tests are to minority pupils, and just how valid their results are. Specialists in educational research and the experts who advise publishers on standardized tests are being pressed to defend these norm-referenced tests.

Auto Industry May Get Going Again During '75

By DAVID R. SARGENT

Q. What do you predict for the auto industry in the coming year? R.T.

A. Although sales should make a good recovery next year from depressed fourth-quarter 1974 levels, they will be far from booming. As I see it, price increases and a better economic tone in the final half should offset a sagging demand in the early months, resulting in output at about the same dollar figure as this year.

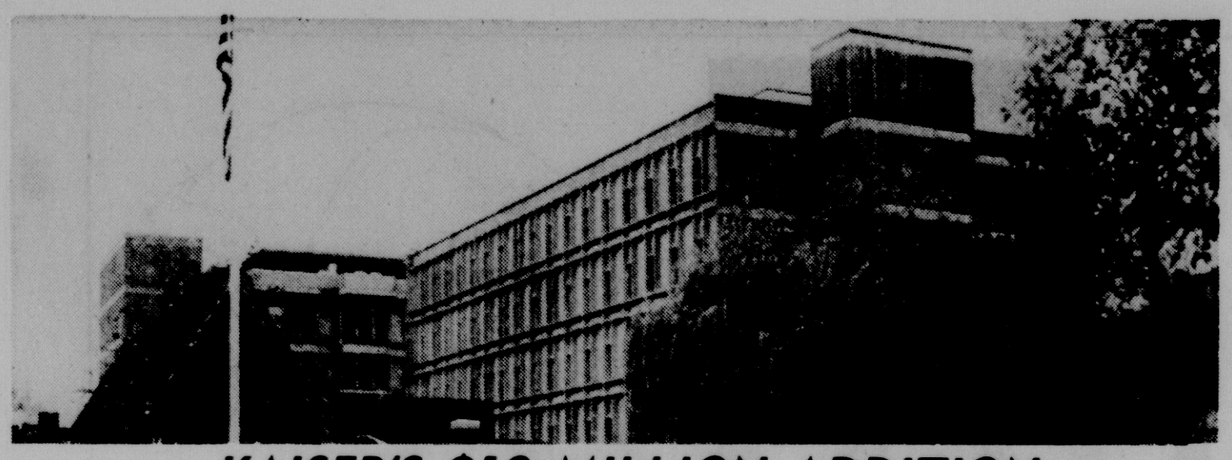
Automobiles have long been a dominant U.S. industry but currently domestic producers are experiencing a serious erosion of sales. Some of the industry's problems, however, are a reaction to good late-summer sales of 1974 models. The industry made known well in advance the sizable price increases it had scheduled for its 1974 models. Apparently more sales were borrowed from potential 1975 model sales than were intended.

Automobile sales should gradually begin to recover when potential customers realize that part of the high price is offset by current high trade-in prices, as well as apparently smaller operating costs. Also, makers of imported cars are just bringing out their 1975 models. Price increases on these will help sales of U.S. vehicles.

Q. I have a couple of stocks I would like your advice on: RCA Corp. (NYSE) and Libbey-Owens-Ford (NYSE). L.H.

A. RCA has, via acquisitions, diversified far afield from electronics into frozen foods and from broadcasting into car rentals. Hold.

Libbey serves the housing and automotive markets, both of which have been hard hit recently. As a result, third-quarter earnings were off close to 50% year to year. Maintenance of the 55-cent quarterly dividend has now become problematical. It was barely covered in the first nine months. In view of this possibility, I would advise sale.



KAISER'S $13 MILLION ADDITION

New medical offices and an in-patient hospital with 92 beds are scheduled for completion in late 1975 at Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center in Terra Linda. The A-frame building in foreground is part of the existing facility, which will be converted to administrative use. Five-story addition at right is the new outpatient building, which will open with 55 doctors' offices. To rear is inpatient building with complete medical services including operating rooms and expanded emergency and X-ray units. Architects were Mayhew and Thiederman of San Francisco, and the contractor F. P. Lathrop Construction Co. of Emeryville.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL, C.P.A.

Penalty Is Possible If You Underestimated Your Taxes

If you did not file an estimate and pay taxes for 1974 and now find that you should have estimated or you underestimated the amount of income tax that you are going to owe at the end of the year, it is possible that you will be hit with a substantial penalty for failure to adequately estimate your taxes.

You must have at least 80 per cent of the total tax that will be due paid in on your estimate or by withholding. Otherwise, an underpayment could be assessed and a bill sent to you immediately after your Form 1040 has been processed next April. This applies only if your estimate was less than your 1973 tax or otherwise does not qualify for the exemption from underestimating penalties.

If you are going to be short and are faced with a penalty and you are employed, you can avoid this penalty by the simple expedient of making an agreement with your employer to have him withhold an additional amount of tax from your wages this year.

That is because the amount withheld from your wages is considered to have been paid in equal quarterly installments in making the computation. So if you are going to be short, have your employer take it out of your December pay and this will get you in good shape for next year's tax return.

Wall Street Gloomy In Moderately Busy Session

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved broadly and sharply lower today in a gloomy atmosphere on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was moderately active in the preholiday session.

The NYSE and American Stock Exchange will close two hours early tomorrow.

Gold mining issues were the bright spots on the market, as bullion prices soared on foreign exchanges. ASA Ltd. and Dome Mines gained 1 ¼ apiece, Homestake Mining 1 ½ and Campbell Red Lake ¾. France announced during the weekend it would revalue its gold holdings to reflect open market prices next year.

Texaco was the second most active issue on the Big Board, off ⅜ to 20 ⅜ on 103,500 shares. Texaco is a member of ARAMCO. Among the other members, Mobil lost ½, California Standard ⅜ and Exxon ⅛.

Glamors were irregular. Corning Glass gained ¾. IBM, Burroughs, Schering-Plough and Xerox were point-sized losers. Chemicals were lower. Monsanto lost 1 ⅜, DuPont 1, and Dow Chemical and Allied Chemical ½ apiece.

Prices also were lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. National Kinney led the Amex actives, off ⅛ to 1 ⅛ on 152,700 shares, including a block of 147,600 shares at 1 ⅛. Flying Diamond when issued followed, off ⅛ to 14 ⅝ on 10,700 shares.

Aztec Import Shop Will Open On Fourth Street This Week

Aztec Imports, specializing in art and crafts handpicked in Mexico, is scheduled to open this week at 1408 Fourth Street in San Rafael, at the former location of Whitney's Band Instruments.

Owners of the new shop are Michael J. and Linda JoAnn Butler of San Rafael, who just returned from one of their monthly buying trips to Mexico. They came to San Rafael on Nov. 1 from McCall, Idaho, where Butler attended Boise State College.

Aztec Imports will carry unusual items such as feather art from Mexico City, pots from Guadalajara, a big selection of wood carvings, flowers made from wood and dried seed pods, pottery and baskets. It will also take on consignment some work by local artists.

The Butlers announced they will accept Master Charge and Bankamericard.

Miss Pardini, who was trained by Vidal Sassoon in London, has been in the business for 17 years, the past two years with Andre Paris Coiffeurs in San Rafael. Miss Reeder owned a salon in Dallas, Tex., for two and one-half years before coming to San Rafael last month and working briefly for Andre Paris.

RIVER CITY, a combination family recreation center and restaurant, is scheduled to open in about a week at 52 Bolinas Road in Fairfax, the former site of Harry's Mart, which closed after 47 years.

Ronald Barbarita of Fairfax, owner of River City, said he hopes to have the recreation section open this week and the kitchen ready for a New Year's Eve party. He is taking reservations now for the New Year's Eve dinner with music by the Dock Conte Trio. The entire interior has been remodeled with extensive use of wood, and space is available for about 150 customers. The recreation area will have billiard tables, darts and various electronic games, and the bar will have wine, beer and draft champagne.

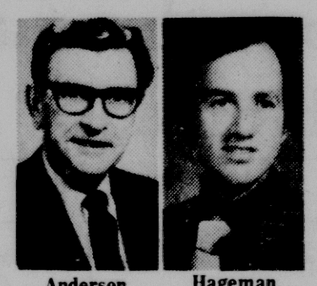
The restaurant, which will be open from about noon to 2 a.m., will offer a variety of soups, sandwiches, hot dogs, pizzas, assorted cold salads, and home fries.

THE FAMILY AFFAIR, featuring hickory smoked meats and all fresh vegetables, opened last week at 720 B Street in San Rafael, the old Mission Inn building.

The new restaurant is closed on Tuesdays but open the rest of the week, from 11 a.m. to midnight weekdays, until 3 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and from 5 p.m. to midnight on Sundays.

Philip J. Harrison of Corte Madera, who has been in the business for about 15 years, is owner and head chef. His manager is Bob Ake of San Rafael, formerly of Berkeley, who has about four years of kitchen experience.

MARVIN B. SIEGEL of San Rafael has joined the residential sales staff of Frank Howard Allen & Co. Realtors in Novato. He was previously with Grubb & Ellis Comapny's Northgate branch office for two years.



Anderson Hageman

JAMES V. ANDERSON of Tiburon and RICHARD D. HAGEMAN of Novato won promotions at Independent Bankers Trust Co. headquartered in the Bank of Marin Building in San Rafael.

Richard Kwapil, company president, announced that Anderson was appointed trust officer and Hageman assistant trust officer.

Anderson joined the Bank of Marin in 1968 and was operations officer and then assistant trust officer in the bank's trust department. In 1973 when Independent Bankers Trust Co. was formed and became the trust company for Bank of Marin and other banks of Independent Bankshares Corp., Anderson became assistant trust officer for the newly formed company.

Hageman came to Bank of Marin in 1972 and joined Independent Bankers Trust Co. in 1973.

SAMSON & DELILAH'S Hair Design, a new shop for men, women and children, opened last week at 912 C Street in San Rafael, next to Cal's Steak House, across the street from McPhail's Inc.

Owned by partners Barbara Pardini and Suzi Reeder of San Rafael, it provides haircuts, blow styling and all services for
